HAVOLINE

a magnificent motor oil

Havoline is the finest base oil with new additives to keep the engine free from carbon and sludge...to make the oil cling to metal. Havoline ensures constant protection from corrosion, even when the car is laid up.

Lubritection
(Lubrication plus protection)

MARFAK

a great grease

Marfak is the unique chassis lubricant that stretches but won't break. Never jolts or squeezes out, never washes out even in the wettest weather. Marfak lasts four times longer than ordinary grease.

Lubritection—the greatest combination for sweeter running—smoother riding

Havoline and Marfak are products of the Regent Oil Company, distributors of the famous Regent Petrols.

DUAFLEX RINGS

KEEP POLICE CAR READY FOR PEAK PERFORMANCE

Here's a car that must always be in tip top condition... Mile after mile of low speed running with frequent stops and starts, yet liable to be called upon at any moment to give every ounce of its speed and power. It has been fitted with Duaflex Rings to control oil consumption, maintain compression and check piston and cylinder wear. The Chief Constable of the Force operating the car writes: "Since fitting these rings, oil consumption has been practically negligible, and I have no hesitation in stating that all that has been claimed from an engineering viewpoint has been realised, plus the economy of lower fuel and oil consumption."

Ask your garage for further details of Duaflex Rings and a quotation for fitting, or apply direct to Wellworthy Limited, Lymington, Hants.

How Duaflex Rings Work

- 1 The vertical sealing spring keeps the rails firmly in the ring groove, forming a gas-tight seal.
- 2 The expander maintains an even outward pressure on cylinder walls, taking up irregularities.
- 3 The rails 'wipe' oil from cylinder walls, avoid scraping and wear.

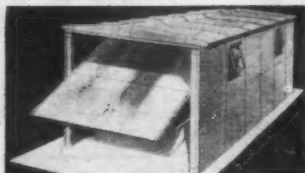

For best results fit Wellworthy Pistons with Matched Sets of Wellworthy Rings at the same time as fitting Duaflex Oil Control Rings.

Reduce oil consumption • Increase compression • Defer rebores

Horsepower or wifepower?

What's the old bus like on hills? Not as good as it should be if the valve springs are past their prime. That's certain, for nothing wastes power like tired valve springs. Luckily, it's not expensive to have new ones fitted. And they soon pay for themselves in petrol saved. Especially if they're Terry's which last so long: are so efficient too.

Dunlopillo seating ensures perfect, restful comfort in travel.

Ronnie Adams, winner of the 1956 Monte Carlo Rally testifies: "It has long been my experience that comfort is absolutely essential if one's chances of winning are not to be thrown away by undue fatigue when driving under hard conditions, and after this year's Monte I am fully convinced that the comfort and stability of the seating fitted to this car played no small part in helping us to win".

JENOGRAPH

at last available to British Motorists!

During tests supervised by L'Automobile Club de France, a car ran for

71 miles without oil
9 miles without oil or water

All bearing surfaces were treated with Jenograph; the sump was drained—the whole engine was completely dry. The car was then run from Rouen to Paris—115 kms. After the tests the sump was refilled with oil and the car ran perfectly normally. This was just one of a series of astonishing tests supervised by the Automobile Club of France using a car treated only with JENOGRAPH. Proof surely of the tremendous lubricating power of Jenograph, which is quite unsurpassed by any type of oil or upper cylinder lubricant in existence today.

This amazing lubricating technique is at last available to British Motorists following its tremendous impact on the continent.

WHAT JENOGRAPH WILL DO FOR YOUR CAR

Overheating, sticking valves, high oil consumption, sluggishness, difficulty in starting, loss of power due to inadequate lubrication—Jenograph can cure any and all of these faults. Even the most efficient engine can be improved. For new or rebored engines we guarantee a 75% cut of running-in time.

Jenograph 'tightens' your engine yet decreases friction. Jenograph results in greatly prolonged engine life, less petrol, less oil, more power with tremendously increased efficiency.

SUPPLIES ARE LIMITED

It is possible to manufacture only small quantities of Jenograph at a time and until sufficient is available to supply to garages, we regret we must restrict sales to direct personal application to the manufacturers on a strictly 'first come, first served' basis. There is a coupon provided at the bottom of this page.

SEND TODAY!

JENOGRAPH IS AVAILABLE IN THREE DIFFERENT FORMS:

JENOGRAPH TYPE 'C'	The new upper cylinder lubricant. An 8/6d. polythene bottle contains sufficient to treat 100 gallons of petrol.
JENOGRAPH TYPE 'E'	For gear-boxes and differentials. It is supplied in 4 oz. tins, price 4/9d. — one tin will last the life of the existing oil.

Well Shod

TO judge by the week-to-week announcements in this country, Europe and across the ocean, no section of the motor industries of the world is more active than the tyre manufacturers. To their credit, it must be said that the average tyre today is relatively a cheap yet remarkably reliable product, and there are few inhabited areas where a new cover or tube cannot be purchased across the counter.

That there is a great deal in hand in what may be termed the performance of tyres for ordinary motoring cannot be doubted by anyone who has visited a race track. Here may be seen tortured treads biting on road surfaces in a manner which can only be described as phenomenal. This provides another example of how racing helps towards the development and safety of ordinary motor cars and their equipment.

In view of the high performance of which the majority of cars are capable today, and the treacherous nature of road surfaces, wet and dry, we have often wondered whether too much attention has been paid to the long life of tyres and not enough to grip. Sometimes these requirements are conflicting. Those racing tyres with treads designed for the ultimate in adhesion have only mediocre wear characteristics and are, among other things, noisy on the road.

Obviously the safety of tyres lies to a great extent in the hands of the individual motorist; if he neglects his tyres—particularly the pressures—or runs on covers which are bald, he must face the possible consequences.

On the whole, British manufacturers have taken a very responsible attitude to tyre design and supply. We would advocate that even more stress be placed on road holding and reliability, even at the expense of other desirable but less important features, such as silence and the ultimate in wear.

Four Thoughts

IT was surprising, on a recent visit to North America, to see as many as half a dozen new-looking cars a day standing forlornly beside the road (usually pulled safely off the highway to avoid obstructing it) with a flat tyre. In England one may drive in a city for a month without seeing a flat tyre, and for a year without experiencing one personally.

Part of the answer is that, in general, American cars are hard on tyres and do much less mileage on a set than would a British or Continental family car—6,000 to 10,000 miles would be representative. As a result owners hold on to tyres as long as possible. Again, whereas British manufacturers turn out their cars with a first-quality tyre fitted, American manufacturers do not always do this. For an extra sum the various heavy duty and so-called safety tyres can be provided, but the fact that they are not a standard component makes the song and dance about other safety measures sound a trifle hollow.

Fresh developments suggest that we are on the verge of a change from five to four tyres on cars. As yet, there are very few people who dare leave the spare at home. The first tyre manufacturer who can produce a truly "flat-proof" tyre—of tubeless, multi-chamber type, perhaps—and so convince motorists that the fifth wheel is unnecessary and that its absence will never result in his being left on the road, deserves to sweep the sales board. He will have done motorists, in this country particularly, a great service because the smaller the car, the greater embarrassment it is to accommodate the spare without reducing the already limited luggage space. The price reduction made possible will be by no means insignificant, tax being involved at home, as well as cost.

We look forward to the day—not too far off—when, if a spare wheel is carried at all, it will be considered in the same category as a part of the foreign touring pack of spares hired from the manufacturer.

Competitors must contend with other traffic touring the mountains at the height of the season. It is this feature of the rally that has worried authorities for many years

Cortina d'Ampezzo, Sunday, July 8.

TO date, the Alpine Rally—or, more properly, the XVIII<sup>me</sup> Critérium International de la Montagne—has been running for two days and one night. Outstandingly the toughest of the great long-distance motoring events, it is curious that the Alpine does not attract anything like the number of entries of, for example, the Monte Carlo. The private entries tend to give the Alpine a miss, leaving it to the works teams which are better able to cope financially with the high casualty rate among the cars; a manufacturer, too, who can claim that one of his cars has survived—much less won a prize in—the six-day mountaineering event has achieved a great advertising point. A list of the drivers tends to read like a Who's Who of famous rallyists.

During the early part of this week, Marseilles and the surrounding coastal villages were the scenes of busy preparations, with brightly coloured cars and the workshop vans of the manufacturers accompanying team entries parked about the towns. The M.G. and Triumph teams made La Viotat their headquarters, the M.G. As strategically, but unpatriotically, finished in scarlet. This was owed to a macabre sense of humour on the part of the Italian peasants. Level-crossing keepers, for example, tend to keep the gates open to the last possible moment for what they suspect to be one of their own cars. Spectators grouped on dangerous corners, too, will excitedly wave on a foreign entry; cars finished in Italian racing red will receive a warning signal to reduce speed.

This is a contest among manufacturers for the great privilege of advertising a team win; strategy, as well as sound cars and drivers, comes in. There is not, as it were, an out and out winner; drivers compete for coupes des Alpes—cups awarded only for a completely clean sheet. Among the entries is the noted French driver, Robert Manzon, celebrating his tenth anniversary of competitive motoring, which began with an Alpine Rally.

MARSEILLES TO THE

The Critérium de la Montagne is taking the following form. Starting last Thursday evening, the 83 entries left Marseilles at one-minute intervals from 7 p.m. onwards to drive through the night to the Italian Monza circuit, near Milan, reached at daylight. This part of the route, as almost all the entire event, climbed and descended, twisted and turned from one formidable Alpine pass to the next.

Before going on from Monza the cars were driven at racing speeds for five laps of the unbanked circuit, the nearest lap to a scheduled set average speed to count. From Monza, in the early morning, back into the mountains and to Cortina d'Ampezzo, where Saturday night was spent in bed. This was stage one.

Early on Saturday morning the cars set out on the second stage—the 195-mile Circuit of the Dolomites; such obstacles as the Falzarego and Pordoi Passes are included in the 195 miles and by this time they have covered over 900 miles in all. Sunday night, too, allowed for a night's rest, before setting out on Monday morning for Zagreb, in Yugoslavia, and another night's rest.

Back they come to Cortina on Tuesday, and on Wednesday the cars go across to Megève. Finally, on Thursday, a 500-mile all-night stage goes back to Marseilles.

On Thursday evening, July 5, the sun shone brilliantly on a Marseilles that sweltered in its basin by the sea; crews, browned during the seaside days before the start, looked hopefully at the high hills and wondered if it would be cooler up there. On either side of the Mille Miglia-style launching ramp the crowds gathered ten-deep. Despite modern reliability of cars, human nature is still primitive enough to be deeply impressed by travel over great distances, to foreign lands. It will take a generation or two more to accustom us to such things, and breed out this instinct; and when it happens a great deal of pleasure will be lost.

Frenchman Georges Robin's little aerodynamic Panhard X87 led away and the French crowds cheered. Also among the up-to-1,100 c.c. cars were the works Standard Tens, crackling healthily as they picked their way through the crowded streets. The works-entered Renault Dauphines, sounding very non-standard, were impressive; possible team prize winners, one felt.

In the next class, 1,000 to 1,300 c.c., there were no British cars—only Wadsworth and Brierly in an Austrian Denzel. The 1,300 to 1,600s, on the other hand, were 60 per cent British, including the Sunbeam Rapier, with five entries, and the M.G. As, also with five. Though their car was painted red, Sears and Best gave a British flavour by dressing themselves identically in British racing green shirts, suitably embroidered with the M.G. octagon.

The next two classes, 2,000 to 2,600 and unlimited, were well supported by British cars—Ford Zephyrs (four), a single Sunbeam Mark 3, three Jaguar the setting sun, the rocky summits of the mountains pink against the sky, and the valleys deep, black, wooded depths. Here again, the little Dauphines impressed, shrieking their way in close formation to the summit, tyres squealing alternately with the full-song note of their exhausts.

This, one pondered, is the first pass of six days of passes; this sort of thing is going to wear tyres very quickly . . . and there is a penalty for arriving at the finish with a different set of tyres.

Soon after the summit there was a secret control and, a few miles on, a second secret check (after St. Logis de Nans) at which the marshal issued a warning not to exceed 80 k.p.h. average over the comparatively good roads of the high plateau that led to the next control

XX140s and a couple of Aston Martins, one French and the other British-entered. There were also the two A.C. Acecas of Walter Grant-Norton and Tom Clarke—Clarke's fresh from the Stelvio hill-climb only a day or two before.

Hardly had they left Marseilles and passed through the flags and cheering crowds in Aubagne and Gemenos, than the cars were confronted with the first indication of the "de la Montagne" nature of the Critérium. The first climb—the Col de l'Espigoulier—wound its way skyward into at Riez. After this brief pause in the crowded and well-lit civilization of the little village, the cars bore their head light beams out again into the wild darkness of the high hills, north-eastward towards Barrême, passing through La Bégude Blanche, Mezel and Châteaudon.

After Barrême came St. André les Alpes, Colmars, the time control at Allos in the early light of a clear dawn, and the formidable Col d'Allos. In some 18 miles of twists, turns, hairpins and right-angles, the poorly made little road clambers up to 7,000 feet and down again, with a formidable, jagged rock face on the inside and a low parapet to save one from glorious uncertainty on the other. To approach anything like the set average on such sections (to keep to it is impossible), the right foot is alternately hard on the accelerator, or hard on the brake; there is no time for half-heartedness. Throughout this stretch the car is in either second or third gear, accelerating and braking at the rate of, perhaps, twenty reversals of loading per minute. The strain on the transmission and brakes can well be imagined.

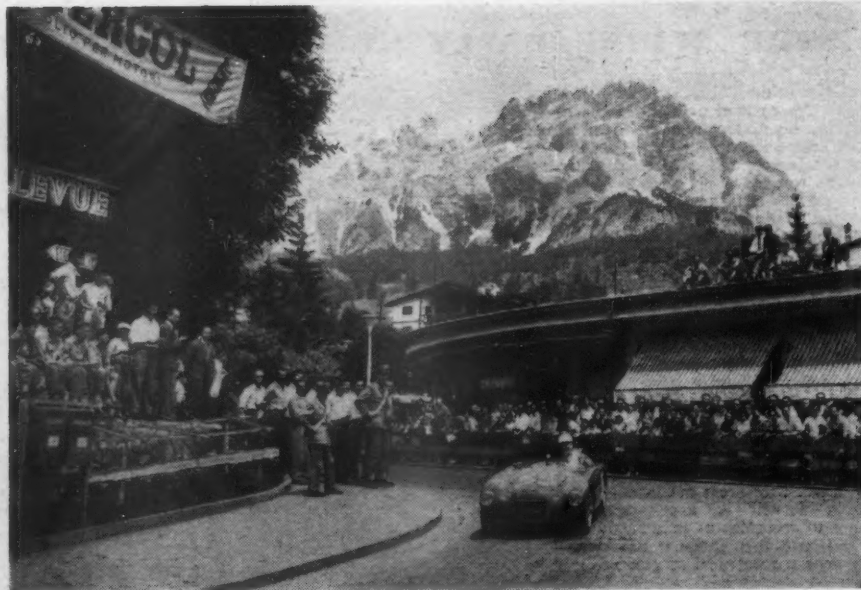

So on, northwards to Barcelonnette, with a complicated system of detours caused by road building. Next came the Col de Vars, slightly wider, perhaps, and shorter than its predecessor, but no less twisting. Keeping in formation, the two Sunbeam Rapiers driven by George Murray-Fraser and Raymond Baxter swung their way down the far side, crisp exhaust notes alternating with brief flashes of the brake lights as the cars rocked and bucked over the rough surface.

After Barcelonnette, and the Col de Vars, came Guillestre—with de Lagencette's Peugeot 203 standing abandoned down the wrong road out of the town—the Col d'Izoard and Briançon. Up the Col du Mont Génèvre and through the French and Italian customs—no delays here, for a change—on to the welcome

MARSEILLES TO THE MOUNTAINS

Competitors passing through Cortina in the Coppa Dolomiti race that coincides with the rally are urged on by the excited crowds relief of the autostrada to Monza. Here, Peter Harper is credited with having covered 180 miles in two hours in a Sunbeam Rapier. Others found the restfulness of the main roads such a contrast with what had gone before that they could hardly keep awake.

At Monza the cars were sent off in their classes, ten cars at a time, to complete five laps of the unbanked circuit. During these five laps, one lap had to be covered in a set time; the lap distance is 5.75 kilometres, and the lap time for each class was as follows: Up to 1,000 c.c., 3min 17sec (65.5 m.p.h.); 1,000 to 1,300 c.c., 3min 08sec; 1,300 to 1,600 c.c., 2min 59sec; 1,600 to 2,000 c.c., 2min 52sec; 2,000 to 2,600 c.c., 2min 45sec, and, over 2,600 c.c., 2min 45sec (78.2 m.p.h.). In effect, of course, a succession of motor races took place.

From Monza a short stretch of autostrada took the cars back into the hills—through Bergamo and Clusone, and over the Vivione, Giovo, Pennes, Gardena, Campolongo, Pordoi and Falzarego passes to Cortina d'Ampezzo for the night. The holiday town, scene of the recent Olympic winter sporting events, was in festive mood. Not only was there the Circuit of the Dolomites to entertain the holiday crowds, but also the Dolomite Gold Cup race over the same 190-mile circuit during the afternoon. The underlying difference between the two events was that the Gold Cup competitors were equipped with well prepared cars, new tyres and brakes. The Dolomite Circuit rally cars however, had already endured an arduous journey and spent the night unserviced in the parc fermé.

It was an early start (before breakfast) with a climb out of Cortina, up the side of the sunlit mountain valley, over the 7,000ft Falzarego and on to the 7,346ft Pordoi, where there was a timed test over the mixed surface, for this pass is being slowly rebuilt.

But although this circuit writhes and twists round the bases of the incredible Dolomite peaks, it was rendered comparatively harmless this year by the action of the Italian Government, which lost its nerve two days before the event and imposed a maximum speed of 50 k.p.h. (just over 30 m.p.h.) for the circuit. The experienced rally drivers found this not difficult, and only two competitors lost marks—Robin's Panhard and Risk and Lamb's Ford Zephyr.

So far, so good; tomorrow we are up with the mountain goat, ready for the 5.15 a.m. start for Zagreb.

The British position is summarized as follows: Of the Sunbeam Rapiers, Murray-Frame's car was in collision with a Porsche and has retired; Jimmy Ray's car went over the edge on the Vivione Pass and has also retired; of the remaining three cars, Harper's and Baxter's are still unpenalized, and Deane's has lost 340 marks. The M.G. As are still intact, Nancy Mitchell's and Jack Sears' being the only ones which are still unpenalized; Nancy Mitchell, in fact, stands second for the Coupe des Dames, with Mme Terray's Peugeot 203 in the lead. The remaining three M.G.s—Shepherd, Milne and Gott—have lost 10, 50 and 220 points.

The Triumph TR3s of Hopkirk, Gatsonides, Kat, Griffiths and Wisdom are all unpenalized; those driven by Ken Richardson and the Frenchman Wicky have retired. Grant-Norton's Acaca has retired and Tom Clarke's similar car is still in the rally, but has lost 60 points. Risk's Ford Zephyr lost 210 points on the Circuit des Dolomites. Hartwell's Mark 3 Sunbeam still has a clean sheet; so has Scott's Ford Zephyr. Burton's and Cunane's Jaguars have both abandoned the rally; Count de Salis' and Lemerle's Aston Martins have both retained clean sheets; Revillon's Aston has lost 70 points. Of the two Standards, Barker has lost 10 points and Owens has retired.

That is the position today, with the Circuit of the Dolomites over; by the time these words see print the position will have altered considerably.

(Next week The Autocar reporting team with the rally will describe the concluding stages to Marseilles.)

Home-made Glass Fibre Body on a Renown

GR<sup>EAT</sup> interest was evinced in two articles by Peter Garnier, published in The Autocar of February 4 and 18, 1955, which, under the title "Crystal Palaces," described in detail the technique of building a car body of resin-bonded glass fibre laminates. A reader, Mr. J. E. Boughton, of Castle Street, Stamford, Lincolnshire, following the advice given in that feature, has made such a body, which he has mounted on a Triumph Renown 1800 chassis; it is seen in the accompanying photographs.

Describing his work, Mr. Boughton writes: "The mould was made, in very easy stages, between June and August, 1955. I chose the steel tube method, having an electric welder of my own. A convex mould was used as it was considered too much to make a concave mould, although this was regretted later because of the time which had to be spent in smoothing the body.

"The body was produced before the end of August, and the car was completed before Christmas, 1955, although the chassis and engine were not obtained until October.

The attractive lines of this home-made glass fibre body are well shown, though the forward overhang is accentuated, and one has doubts about the ground clearance.

"Three layers of plastic and glass fibre were used—two layers of chopped strand mat, 1oz per sq ft, and one layer of open-weave glass cloth. The total weight of the car is now only 19cwt, against the original car weight of 26½cwt."

Originally performance—maximum about 70 m.p.h.—and petrol consumption—20 m.p.g. at 50 m.p.h.—were disappointing, says Mr. Boughton, but after spending some time working on the engine, top speed is now 80 m.p.h. and acceleration is quite lively.

Mr. Boughton adds that he will gladly advise any would-be body builder on the basis of his own experience; he is to be congratulated on so successful an outcome of the work of his own hands.

He gives the following details of expenditure on the mould, the body and some of the ancillary fittings:—

For the Spectacled Driver

THE bespectacled driver must always be at a disadvantage vis-à-vis with the normally sighted motorist by reason of the restriction of his field of vision, especially for those eye-corner observations which often are so very valuable. Accordingly many are content to accept the disadvantages of carrying two pairs of spectacles—one for driving and out of doors, another for reading—in order to avoid any sacrifice of long-range field of vision.

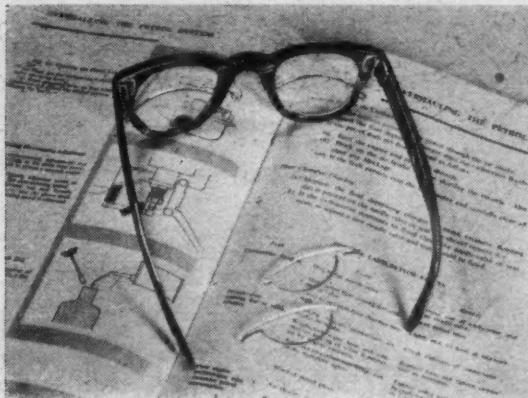

A London optician has devised an arrangement which he calls "optional bi-focals," permitting addition of supplementary lenses for close work, television viewing and the like, to one's normal spectacles. These are accommodated in a small channel behind the usual lens, and secured by lugs which engage in slots, one in each nose-pad and one on each of the outer sides of the spectacle frames. They are held securely, even when the spectacles are turned upside down, but are easily removed; they can be made to cover any field of vision. They are of unbreakable, light plastic and they can be carried in small pockets inside the usual spectacle case.

Two pairs of optional bi-focals have been used by a member of The Autocar editorial staff for several months, and are shown in the accompanying illustration. Those seen in place in the spectacle frame are for use at the desk and when reading; the smaller pair are for map-reading and the like on the road. Both have been found to be convenient, efficient and comfortable in regular use, and the user would not now wish to be without them; the smaller set have not proved an embarrassment in use during driving, since they affect only the lower part of the field of vision, normally directed to the instruments, maps, and so on.

These optional bi-focals are now in production; motorists who are interested may make enquiry of their own optician.

The new optional bi-focal lenses

Health Service Abroad

UNDER the R.A.C.'s new "Touring Insurance" scheme, motorists may insure themselves against medical expenses while touring abroad. Premiums vary according to the duration of cover from 10s for a £50 policy running for 16 days, to £4 for the highest benefit of £250 extending over two months. The R.A.C. policy covers the payment of all professional charges made by doctors and hospitals or nursing homes, and operates in all countries on the Continent west of the "Iron Curtain." This is a useful cover for countries where the "national health" is one's private concern. The rates quoted have been described, independently, as exceptionally good.

60 m.p.g. Russian Midget

THE Russian Serpukhov motor cycle works is reported to have produced trial models of a small, two-seater car for which a consumption of 60 m.p.g., and top speed of 50 m.p.h. is claimed. There are said to be two versions—a streamlined, closed model with 10 h.p. engine and an open car with canvas top and 8 h.p. engine. The engines are air cooled, and are installed at the rear.

European Pipeline

PLANS for a pipeline to carry crude oil from the Mediterranean port of Marseilles across France to Paris, Strasbourg, Cologne, Antwerp, Rotterdam and Wilhelmshaven are being studied by the Royal Dutch-Shell Group. To Britain, its interest lies in the possibility of a slight decrease in the price of motor fuel.

Record Bid

EARLY next month a party of drivers and mechanics will leave the M.G. Car Co., Ltd., destined for Salt Lake City, America, where the company will make further attempts on the existing speed records. The same streamlined M.G. which was taken to Utah in 1954 will be used again, the main differences being the use of an experimental twin o.h.c. engine, and the conversion of the car to right-hand drive.

The intention is to attack the Inter-

OFFICER CADETS of the Royal Engineers built this "emergency" Bailey bridge across the river Trent at Shardlow in 1947, when the ancient Cavendish bridge was swept away in a flood. Now, nine years later, this bottleneck on A6 at Derbyshire is at last to be replaced by a new three-span reinforced concrete bridge and a new system of approach roads. The new bridge should be in use by the end of the year, and will cost about £250,000 national Standing Start records in class F up to 12 hours, and incidentally the American National Flying Start records for the same distances and periods. An attempt will also be made on class F of the International Flying 10 miles record. M.G. hope to have the car back in London before the Motor Show at Earls Court, London, in October.

The car is basically an M.G. A chassis equipped with a special two-seater body and cowl cockpit which completely encloses the driver. Brakes, wheels, suspension and steering will be standard, but a special high ratio rear axle will be used giving 143 m.p.h. at 5,000 r.p.m. The engine is a 1½-litre four cylinder unit, unsupercharged, and fitted with two twin choke carburettors. The engine compression ratio is 9.3 to 1, and develops approximately 100 b.h.p. The car will carry 30 gallons of ordinary premium grade fuel, and will weigh 19½ cwt laden, including driver.

The salt flats have been reserved from August 10 to 24 for the record attempts.

NEWS AND

Stormy Outlook

PROPOSAL to call a strike of all employees of the British Motor Corporation on July 23, involving 55,000 workers at 13 plants, was recommended this week by national officials of trades unions concerned, unless B.M.C. either reinstate the 6,000 workers dismissed on the grounds of redundancy or afford them adequate compensation. The unions also propose to seek from B.M.C. assurances of full consultation in future. Individual unions have since been discussing the plan, and their national officials will meet again tomorrow to consider reports from those unions.

Meanwhile the ripples in the pond continue to spread—Girling, at the time of going to press, were the latest to announce redundancy dismissals.

Sea-front Parking

REDCAR, a north Yorkshire seaside resort, is considering the introduction of season tickets for the car parks along its sea front. The tickets would cost 10s, and would be available to residents only. The present deterrent fee of 1s for casual parkers will be continued.

Questions in the House

TELEVISION addicts, incensed by spoilt images on the screen, must have instigated a Parliamentary question about suppressors on motor vehicles. Mr. Brockway asked the Minister of Transport if he would take powers to make them compulsory, utilizing the annual licence to ensure they had been fitted. The reply was that new cars must already have suppressors, and Mr. Molson commented quite rightly that it would not be proper to enforce such a rule by indirect means.

In another reply, Mr. Harold Watkinson announced that he was to experiment with road markings to control overtaking. (White lines as on the Continent.)

FOR THE RECORD: the M.G. experimental car, EX 179, which will be used for the record attempt described above: the car is seen here with H. Stone, H. Riddell and C. Bray, who were responsible for its final assembly

Yellow Peril?

A SUGGESTION that all provisional drivers should have a bright yellow disc fixed to their cars with an official seal, to be kept there until the learner-driver passed his test, is being considered by West Hartlepool (Co. Durham) Accident Prevention Council. It has been put forward after complaints that local learners are discarding their L plates and going off on trips. The committee has been told by local police chiefs that reporting of learners guilty of such practices should not be regarded as "informing" but as public-spirited.

Renault Production

FRANCE'S nationalized Renault company announces that last year a total of 228,037 vehicles was manufactured, worth approximately £143,000,000, producing an income of approximately £143,000,000, and a profit of about £2,608,000. However, Renault exports totalled only 64,747. This is a comparatively small proportion of the total output of France's largest car manufacturer.

Easier Payments, but...

MAJOR hire-purchase finance companies in Australia have relaxed the terms for the buying of new cars, the initial payment being reduced from 33½ to 25 per cent, and the term for repayment increased from two and a half to three years. This would have been excellent news for British manufacturers but for the unfortunate coincidence with the Australian decision to cut imports of assembled cars by 50 per cent and of chassis by 30 per cent.

WESTMINSTER COMMENTARY:

MOTORING OFFENCES

PUNISHMENT for motoring offences has become, in these days of increased congestion, a moot point among Parliamentarians, lay motorists and the law. The argument was again taken up in the House of Lords during Committee stage of the Road Traffic Bill, when Lord Lucas moved an amendment seeking to fix the fine for dangerous or reckless driving at not less than £50, except in special circumstances. He said that though a maximum penalty had been set, it was rarely imposed, the average fine being no more than about 10 per cent of the maximum.

The Lord Chancellor believed it was wrong for Parliament to interfere with the judiciary's work. He believed that the powerful weapon of disqualification was not used enough, and Lord Lucas's amendment might deflect attention from this penalty. The Government considered that the magistrates' courts would be advised to review the scale of punishments which are habitually imposed for motoring offences.

Lord Lucas withdrew his amendment. An interesting sequel to this debate came a day or two later in the form of a letter to The Times from the chairman of the Bromley Magistrates' Court. In the light of his experience he felt that penalties

Honour for Mr. Hancock

MR. E. W. HANCOCK, director and general manager of Humber, Ltd., the manufacturing organization of the Rootes Group, and one of the most distinguished production engineers in British industry, has been elected president of the Institution of Production Engineers. A member almost from its inception, he has served on the Council of the Institution for many years, and was chairman from 1930 to 1932. Present chairman is Mr. H. G. Gregory.

Chrysler Exports

NEWLY elected president of Chrysler Export Corporation, in charge of all activities outside the United States, is Mr. E. C. Row.

Rapping the Wrap-round

A LEADING American eye specialist has condemned the wrap-round windscreen as a diabolical device, creating visual distortions which could lead to traffic accidents. He said manufacturers had all been guilty of the human failing of allowing style and so-called beauty of design to supersede the safe and functional. "They have allowed the stylists first to decide what would catch the public eye, and then build the car with this solely in mind, and function be damned," he said. The most blatant example of this policy in recent years was the wrap-round windscreen—the stylists' dream or nightmare had been allowed to run rampant.

New Directors

TWO members of the board of the Ford Motor Co., Ltd., have been appointed executive directors. They are Mr. H. A. Denne, O.B.E., and Mr. F. E. W. Hammond; Mr. Denne joined the company in 1934, and Mr. Hammond in 1933. Both directors were appointed to the board in July last year.

U.S. Output Down

CAR production in America during the first half of this year was nearly 25 per cent less than the total for the same period last year. Respective figures were: 1955, 4,250,000; 1956, 3,190,000. The decline has not been uniform, since output has been cut progressively during the six months period; the June figure of 430,000 cars was nearly 34 per cent below the total for June last year. For the first half of the year, General Motors' production was down by 17 per cent, and Ford's by nearly 25 per cent; Chrysler production fell by over 40 per cent, and there were even sharper reductions at American Motors and Studebaker-Packard.

Passing of a Pioneer

WITH regret the death is recorded of Mr. John Henry Porter, a founder of the London motoring firm of Boon and Porter, Ltd., of Castelnau. A member of the Circle of 19th Century Motorists, he took part in the first motoring event ever held at Brooklands.

Some Notes on Fuel Injection

THE winning Jaguar in the twelve-hour sports car race at Rheims was fitted with Lucas fuel injection, and its performance showed that although it did not have a noticeably higher maximum speed than the otherwise similar cars fitted with Weber carburettors, acceleration over the first hundred yards from a standing start was quicker. It seemed surprisingly tractable when being manoeuvred by the mechanics in the paddock before and after the race.

There were two features of the installation worthy of special comment, as each may have some bearing on the very good throttle response which the car seemed to possess. One of the early difficulties in fuel injection was its lack of snap on sudden throttle openings. In the Lucas system, the normal type throttle plate is replaced by a gate or plate valve which has in it six holes, corresponding in size and pitch to the inlet ports at the manifold joint face. Opening is achieved by sliding the plate fore and aft by means of a rack and pinion situated at one end, and it has a movement of a little more than the port diameter. At full opening, there is no throttle spindle and butterfly valve end-on area to restrict the port.

The injection nozzles, placed facing upstream, spray the fuel into the incoming air, and the ends of the nozzles do not project into the port area. Usually in port injection the nozzles are positioned to spray in the direction of flow. It would appear that better mixing is achieved by spraying against the direction of air flow together with some diminution of eddies behind the throttle plate at part openings.

The Jaguar has considerably flared trumpet intakes to each port, and in the fully open position there is an uninterrupted path from the front edge of the intake to the valve, which must achieve a considerable ram effect in filling.

This racing experience with fuel injection is invaluable and, particularly if Jaguars run with such an installation at Le Mans, will help to prove that it could be made available for production if the cost permits. At the present stage it would seem that the production engineers will have a very hard task to make it available at a price not too much more than that of a twin carburettor set.

The American picture is somewhat different, and the engineers of the big corporations say that fuel injection will be offered to the public in two years' time. In the first instance undoubtedly it will be offered as an alternative to the twin four-choke carburettors in their "power-pack" models, for which there is a surprisingly big sale in America. In addition, they can talk in large quantities, so that with the aid of automation and the cheaper manifolding possible, the overall price will not be so far removed from that of a compound carburettor set-up.

The Americans are not fond of complicated castings requiring expensive cores and calling for a lot of handling, and the induction pipes of their present Vee-eight engines are certainly in this category. For fuel injection the induction system could be largely fabricated from pressings, for which they have a preference.

Their dislike of castings involving hand work is one of the contributing factors to the severe camshaft wear trouble which they ran into shortly after adopting the Vee engine and overhead valve layouts. The majority of British engines use a cast-iron camshaft with chilled noses for the cams. The chilling is a hardening process, achieved by inserting steel chills set in the moulds to give a rapid cooling of the molten metal after pouring.

The Americans discovered that this method overcame their troubles, but the hand work made it more expensive than the case-hardened steel process which they use, and they developed a range of surface treatments in order to use their established methods.

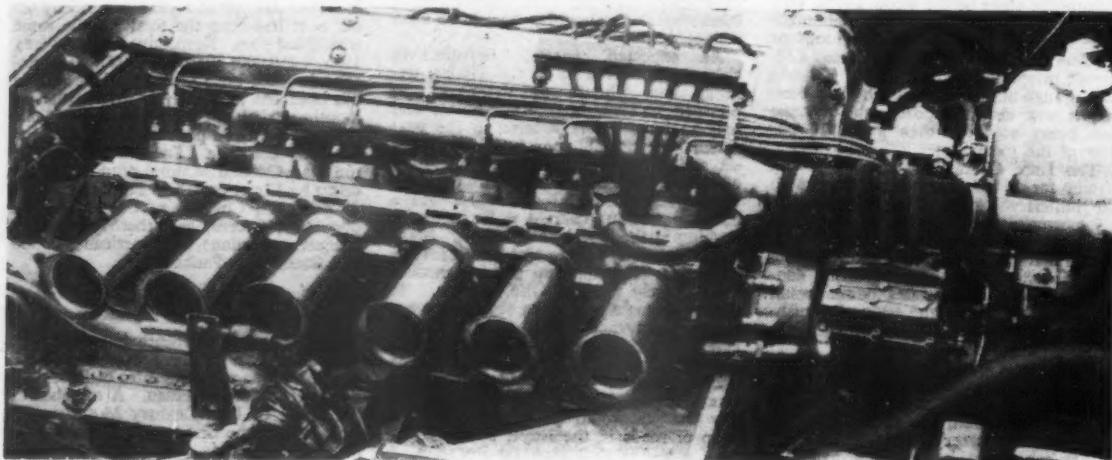

When fuel injection does arrive for the everyday car, present development does not yet indicate whether it will be port- or direct-injection type. For maximum power, particularly over a comparatively narrow speed range, the balance appears to be in favour of direct injection. By fully exploiting this method, large overlaps between the inlet and exhaust valves can be used to provide good scavenging conditions. By taking advantage of this, when direct injection was adopted in the Daimler Benz DB601 aero engine in 1938, the rated altitude output of 2,100 b.h.p. was raised by 10 per cent.

Over wide throttle ranges, the high-pressure direct-injection method is probably inferior to the low-pressure port type, particularly in small cylinder sizes. The problem is to achieve a desired degree of turbulence and mixing, and to prevent the fuel impinging on the cylinder walls. These difficulties are well known in the diesel engine field, and explain the large variety of swirl chambers, introduced to overcome the problems in cylinders under 500 c.c. capacity. Good mixing can be achieved over a wide range with port-type injection, and contrary to popular opinion the volumetric efficiency is equally good. The latent heat of vaporization of the fuel lowers the intake charge, and in theory restores the volume of air which is occupied by the fuel.

Although extravagant claims are made for the improvements which can be achieved with fuel injection. The major gains are probably obtained from the obstruction-free induction tracts which it allows, thus making more effective use of air pulsations to obtain better cylinder filling.

PRACTICALLY IN SPAIN

ASSUMING that the would-be traveller has already arranged the obvious preliminaries such as obtaining documents for the car, and that he possesses a passport, what special hints are useful to the motorist in Spain? First of all, it is not one of the countries which accepts a British driving licence, so that an International one must be obtained. This will be issued by the motoring organizations at the same time as a carnet. A single-journey triptyque is not available at present for the country.

A warning to travellers hoping to use laissez passer: Spanish Customs authorities are very strict about the temporary importation of motor vehicles into their country, and the driver hoping to travel independently may find himself faced with delay and demand for a deposit equivalent to the value of the car. One experimenting motorist had to find £300 as a guarantee that his car would be coming out of the country again (this guarantee can, incidentally, be made by a friend inside Spain), and was forced to use the services of a moneylender, who charged no less than £12 for the fortnightly loan. This gentleman was waiting at the post to offer his aid to the independents.

The carnet-holder should beware of frontier agents who may ask if they can assist, but would only present the documents to the Customs—for a charge of 100 pesetas. Their services are not needed.

From Dunkirk to Barcelona is 866 miles—a three-day journey for the average car. The busiest and simplest frontier crossing is at Irun on the Atlantic coast, where the Pyrenees have flattened out to meet the sea. If you wish to go over the Pyrenees on a main road, there is the magnificent Col de Puymorens, which climbs from Ax-les-Thermes in France over to Puigcerda in Spain, passing on its way the frontier road to Andorra. On the Mediterranean coast, Perpignan-La Jonquera is an easy main road entry. The Puerto de Viella towards the centre (which goes through a tunnel) is easy, as is the Col de Somport (N134-N330), a short, tarred road crossing. Some passes are very wild and a guide should be consulted before using them.

The bigger customs-houses are open day and night during the summer. The holder of a carnet must pay stamp and other duties amounting to 50 pesetas (9s 2d) on first entering Spain. Currency for a private journey can be obtained from a bank without T-form red tape these days, but it is, of course, necessary to give them advance warning; 1 peseta equals about 2½d.

One advantage of travelling in Spain is that the tourist gets favourable exchange rates. Standards of accommodation are assured by the Government, but in the simple categories visitors must expect only Spanish dishes and no luxury. On the other hand, such accommodation is remarkably cheap. Owing to the hotness of the climate, the evening meal is served very late, about 9 or 10 o'clock, and the midday meal about 3 p.m. to correspond. Holiday-makers will soon attune themselves to Spanish habits, and will find in no time that an afternoon siesta is an absolute necessity!

Cooking in olive oil is the custom, and, as with every Continental country, unless you have a cast-iron digestion it is as well to go slow with eating at first. A plain "tortilla" (omelette) is a good standby if you are feeling a bit "off."

Bodega wines, on most lists, are cheap and good and in the south, the vino coriente (blanco, secco) is pleasantly cool.

The dishes? Shell-fish on the coast, mixed with chicken in a pilaff or paella; a stew or cocido, or a pork dish (pote) in other parts; zarzuela de pescado on the Mediterranean. In Malaga the local white-bait—chanqueta—is excellent and onion soup and steaks abound.

It is perhaps well to remember that the ban on bare arms and bikinis is disappearing only in the popular areas. But here and certainly elsewhere the feminine element of the holiday should dress modestly if she does not wish to offend her Spanish hosts. Shorts are "out" for men.

If you want more information, consult the A.A. Foreign Touring Guide (7s 6d) or, specifically for that part, A Fortnight on the Costa Brava, by Gordon Cooper (3s 6d). The Spanish Tourist Office, of 70, Jermyn Street, London, S.W.1, will supply lists of hotels and a host of other enticing details and maps. Michelin guides and maps, too, can be purchased in Spain and are particularly good for that country. Premium petrol is available in all main Spanish towns.

THE PAINFUL PENCE

COST OF RUNNING A CAR

RECENTLY issued by the Automobile Association is a very useful table of estimated running costs based on current values. The table, reproduced on this page, needs little explanation. The unit used throughout is the recognized one of pence per mile, and although this involves decimal points, it is by far the best for detail accounting.

The table is divided into two main sections—the top one is of standing charges, with four specimen costs per mile resulting from them at different mileages per annum. The lower section is of running costs, and the lowest of all brings both of these together in a total cost per mile figure based on 10,000 miles per annum.

Certain explanatory notes apply to the headings. The insurance figure is based on average tariff rates, class one, calculated over five districts. For older vehicles of less insurable value the actual insurance premium in pence per mile should be substituted. Depreciation is based on the life of 80,000 miles at 10,000 miles per annum, and here again with older vehicles the depreciation factor should be assessed individually.

The interest on capital figure is what the new car value would have earned if invested at 3 per cent per annum. This is another figure that should be adjusted for older car values. Garaging cost is the 10s per week average which applies throughout the country, and the subscription is the rather jolly one of A.A. membership, which no table of A.A.-calculated costs could be expected to lack. Petrol price has been calculated at 4s 6d per gallon. Tyre life was reckoned to be 20,000 miles and general servicing every 500 miles or two weeks. Repairs and replacements were estimated on the basis of the total cost over a life of 80,000 miles.

The A.A. points out that a schedule of this type can be regarded only as a guide, as the figures are based on average costs in relation to one specific make of car, but most motorists will agree that the publication of such figures is a useful service.

Disconnected Jottings

BY THE SCRIBE

Off the Circle

NO sympathy would be accorded by this motorist to his fellows who were summoned for parking on a roundabout; in fact, I wish the police would jump hard on this practice, which surely offends against every canon of common sense. A roundabout is a cross-roads, and to park on it is equivalent to parking on a cross-roads (which, admittedly, the stupider type of motorist will do). I would include in the definition of roundabout the big circulatory systems embracing buildings, which are only enlarged roundabouts in effect, such as Vauxhall, in London, or the cathedral square at Coventry. Drivers circumnavigating such systems, or simple roundabouts, are often concerned with selecting their appropriate route—not an easy task if one is a stranger. It is insufferable that, at the same time they should have to thread their way between cars parked in space that is meant to provide elbow room for crossing traffic.

Where I think space could be made for vehicles is on the over-wide pavements of some suburbs in the bigger cities. They were laid down in the earlier years of the century, in what was largely a pedestrian world and nowadays are flagged areas of emptiness most of the time. More of that emptiness could be incorporated in the highway during this era of wheeled transport; one sees occasional examples, and wonders why there are not many more.

Seats

IN one respect I seem to be more fortunate than some motorists—I can readily adapt myself to various driving positions, and am not rigid in my own favourite—seat well back and arms fairly straight out. Consequently, I am left a little cold by the violence of some motorists concerning seating adjustment. However, puzzlement is one's lot at the antipathy that some drivers have to the low seat and near-horizontal legs driving position. "Don't you find it awfully tiring?" they ask, and I remember chatting with a well-known Italian driver who ridiculed the liking of British sports car designers for this particular position.

In fast driving the stretched leg permits better bracing against braking and curves than the "kitchen chair" stance, and the leverage is better for operating a stiff clutch and for violent braking. As regards human tiredness, there does not seem to be much in it. If the seat is well-designed the end of the spine is sufficiently cushioned not to ache, and "feet up" is a restful position at any time.

As I say, I can be pleased by either position provided that other things are equal, though in the odd life that the long-distance professional motorist leads, I find that sleeping in the car is better with the legs straight out instead of down.

Alvis

A PUBLICATION called The Vintage Alvis, concerned with the 12-50, gives a few scratchings about the origin of the name. Popular etymology, it says, suggests that it is made up of "al" for aluminium and the Latin vis for strength, but a more romantic story links it with an elusive young woman named Avis, with the L added because Avis would not fit in the triangle of the badge: improbable! In The Autocar, during 1920, Mr. G. P. H. de Freville says that he invented the name in connection with the manufacture of aluminium pistons. Anyway, it is pleasantly euphonious.

I wish a manufacturer would make a comeback with one of those resounding double-barrelled names. Can no one compete with Angus-Sanderson, Isotta-Fraschini and Hispano-Suiza? Or Armstrong Siddeley and the alliterative Rolls-Royce?

Cock-eyed

MY pupil was a conscientious one. "I could have dodged round in front of that lorry by using the back streets," he remarked, "but I suppose that would be funk the job of getting past it." As we had been following the blundering mammoth at 20 m.p.h. for about five miles I let go a broadside. "That," I pontificated, "is allowing conscientiousness to override common sense and is a dam' silly attitude, just about equivalent to that of the ship's master who goes down with his vessel." There is no doubt that an over-developed sense of responsibility borders on the irresponsible and the driver in question is now in no doubt that his tutor is less rigid than he is in this respect, but undoubtedly faster through the traffic.

No Excuse Necessary

I CAN'T help disapproving of those labels which proud owners of new cars fix in their rear windows, saying "Running in, please pass." They give the impression that the driver is trying to tell you, without actually saying so, that he normally drives much faster; that, but for the handicap of a tight engine, he would be pressing on, passing you and everything else on the road. It smacks of a self-effacement that is quite unnecessary, a backing into the limelight. After all, who cares if somebody does want to keep down to 30 m.p.h.—provided that he does so off the crown of the road. I like to potter myself sometimes, but I don't expect to have to apologize about it.

A much cleverer line, recently adopted by a French manufacturer, is a little placard which says, "Today a tortoise; tomorrow a hare." Somehow, it seems to take the mock humility out of it.

People's Dispute

TO anyone who has been to Wolfsburg, the gigantic one-make automobile city so near the eastern border of Western Germany, the idea that the Volkswagen firm's ownership should be in dispute seems fantastic; I suppose VW is now Germany's greatest asset. The history of the dispute is well known—an association of pre-war "people's car" purchasers claimed to be owners but was turned down; it has now re-entered the lists from a new direction and the legal argument will take a long time to resolve. In the meantime the West German government is looking for ways to safeguard its interests and to prevent the possible sale of the firm to rivals within Germany or without.

However, the German finance minister, Herr Schaeffer, seems to have been a little indiscreet if West German newspapers are to be believed; their information came in the form of remarks to the press which ought not to have been issued. Herr Schaeffer was reported to favour the sale, but he said that he would not allow the firm to pass into foreign hands or into the hands of VW competitors in Germany. A minimum sale price quoted was £83 million, a figure near the total turnover for 1954, which was the last yearly account published. Professor Erhard, the West German Economics Minister, agreed with his colleague and seemed to favour a sale in small holdings to many owners. He hoped to produce a plan in Germany's election year—1957.

I wonder what Dr. Ing. Nordhoff thinks about all this? Nordhoff, however theatrical his leadership, is one of the great men of motor manufacture and I should imagine that he is as impatient of the sordid scramblings of finance as are most visionaries.

More and More

I KNOW what he meant, but I think the Minister of Transport was not well served by his choice of words when he said: "If we want more roads . . . at home then we must sell more abroad, however difficult it may be." Difficulty is right; does any foreigner want A1, at 3s. 11½d. a yard?

This report on a caravan tour to Spain is timely, for it takes the form of a rehearsal of the journey many will make to the international rally at Barcelona early next month. References to the Costa Brava may be amplified by a pictorial feature, including details of motoring costs, published in The Autocar on June 22. The rally is organized in this country by the Camping Club of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Caravan Club.

CARAVANNERS and campers from many nations will assemble at Castldefells, a few miles south-east of Barcelona, from August 3 to 12, and a number of entrants from the United States are expected to put in an appearance. These will be led by the redoubtable Wally Byam, and it is to be hoped that none of the lengthy American "trailers" will get stuck in some of the narrow streets of Spain.

To help individual caravanners going to the rally, especially those venturing abroad for the first time, The Autocar commissioned this reconnaissance of the journey; the outward portion followed the easy roads and the return was by way of passes through the Pyrenees and the French Central Massif. The outfit used was a Wolseley 6/90, towing an Alperton Sprite 14. Of this combination it is impossible to speak too highly, and some comments on the Sprite 14 will later form a separate article.

It must be made clear that there is a completely different outlook on caravanning in France as compared with that obtaining in Britain and, with the exception of popular seaside resorts, vans may stop almost everywhere. For a night halt, delectable spots by the roadside can be utilized or corner jacks dropped in town squares. Permission to stay on enclosed land is always freely given, and application to a local gendarme for a suitable site meets with an immediate response.

Because of the convenience of driving on and off, many caravanners will cross the Channel on one of the car ferries, but by comparison with the Newhaven-Dieppe crossing either of these adds over 100 miles of extra towing over some of the worst French roads.

Crossing to Dieppe, we were free of French Customs by about 4.30 p.m. and spent the first night in the town's municipal site—in an orchard up on the cliffs between Dieppe and Pourville. This is a pleasant, clean site with water and reasonable sanitation. The way to it is well signposted, but care must be taken when negotiating the right-hand hairpin bend at the beginning of the climb.

The first day's run south through France lay via Rouen, Dreux, Chartres and Orleans. It is difficult to lay down a suitable daily mileage—some like to meander, others to eat the miles. We find that something over 200 miles a day through the more attractive areas is about right, although at times we stray far from these figures. For instance, a couple of hours can be easily taken up by stopping to admire the wonderful stained glass in Chartres Cathedral.

An arrangement found to be very convenient is to stop in a town during the late afternoon and here fill up with water and petrol (6s 5d a gallon in France) while the ladies do the shopping. From then onward all is ready for stopping at the most suitable night halt.

In this instance the Sprite 14 was pulled some 100 yards off the road into a forest clearing near Massay, some 30 miles before Chateauroux, making the day's run approximately 217 miles.

Still keeping to the main roads, the second day's journey was through Argenton, Limoges and Brive, pulling up in the town square of Cahors for the night. This was typical Continental transit caravanning. Unlike ourselves, who stay either on a commercial site or on farmland, the Continental caravanner parks either in a municipal site or—and more often—in a town square. The day's run had been fairly easy, despite a rather winding road between Limoges and Brive and a stiff climb at Sauvillat.

For a town night halt, it is essential that the van should have an interior toilet. Do not imagine that on stopping in a town square you will be pestered by onlookers. The French are an incurious race and at Cahors the only intrusions on our privacy were by a gentleman who spoke English and enquired whether he could help at all, and another who held the keys of the municipal toilets and wanted to know if we would like them left open all night!

Our third day out from Dieppe led us almost to the foothills of the Pyrenees. Considerable time was spent while some of the party went over the ancient city of Carcassonne. A tourist showpiece, maybe, but no one should pass by. The prescribed route lay through Narbonne and Perpignan, but we made a slight detour in order to visit the small town of Coursan. This place has happy memories because M. Lucien Goulesque, the secretary of the local Syndicat d'Initiatif, makes a great point of welcoming British caravanners himself. He will introduce the local wines with much pride. Archeveque (rosé) and Harry Ham (sparkling white) are to be recommended—the latter going well with French "cat's tongue" bisquit. The site is on the local football field, and soon after arrival someone will be along to open up the dressing room to make a water supply and showers available.

Approach to the Spanish border at La Junquera was made the next day with some apprehension—our previous entry into Spain had appeared anything but welcome. This time, however, a metaphorical red carpet and awning were laid out to greet us. Nobody could be too kind—the Customs official stamped our carnets (for 24s), looked at neither the Wolseley nor the Sprite, and wished us a happy holiday.

Driving toward Barcelona on road N2, entry into Spain is immediately noticeable by the thinning out of the traffic, the rather rougher roads and the absence of filling stations. These latter are so rare that they are of sufficient importance to be marked on maps. Beware lest you are caught out with an empty tank 20 miles or more from the nearest pump. Supplies are being improved in the holiday areas but are still rather scarce, and caravanners in particular will notice the poor quality of the Spanish gasoline.

N2, through Figueras and Gerona, runs almost parallel to the fashionable Costa Brava holiday coast. If time permits, a few days can be very pleasantly spent here. There are a number of sites available but from personal use can be recommended the Calonge site at San Antonio (this is frequently referred to in sites lists as the Palamos site) and the one at Malgrat. San Antonio is convenient for the centre and northern parts of the Costa Brava, up to Rosas, and Malgrat for the Tossa area. If, however, it is intended to drive from San Antonio to Malgrat with a van in tow, avoid the coast road, which is very tortuous and has hundreds of very sharp bends between S. Feliu de Guixols and Tossa. At Malgrat there is a fine beach, with fir trees for shade, within 500 yards.

At the time of making this reconnaissance the Spaniards had not announced the exact position of the International site, and for Barcelona we used the one at Mongat, about six miles north of the city. It is laid out in five or six terraces, with a path on either side for driving up to the selected level. A wise precaution is to look over the approach before tackling it with a car and caravan. Reasonably good toilet facilities are available and there is a small store on the site, but we liked doing our shopping in the tiny Mongat market place.

The coast road leads into Barcelona via the Calle de Pedro IV, which heads direct into the old part of the city—an area to be avoided entirely by caravan outfits. Those going straight through Barcelona will be wise to turn right into Paseo del Emperador Carlos I and left into Avenida de Jose Antonio Primo de Rivera; they will then be on the road leading directly to the International Rally site at Castell-defells.

Outings in Spain will be dictated by personal tastes and pockets, and the time at one's disposal. There is the coast road which runs all the way through Valencia and Malaga to Gibraltar, and Madrid is some 500 miles away. A very pleasant trip is to fly to the island of Majorca. The Spanish air line has a very good record for safety, and the aircraft used on this run are made by Bristols. If time presses, the visit can be made in one day, catching an early morning aircraft for the outward journey and returning by the service leaving the island at 10.45 p.m.

For the return route home, those with a fair power-to-weight ratio might be tempted to take a more adventurous route—over the Pyrenees, calling, perhaps, at Andorra. This is a delightful little place where premium petrol costs only 3s 4d a gallon. There is a small site by the side of the river, owned by the grocer, on the south-east side of the main road. In return for the use of the site, one is expected to deal at his shop.

This route is by way of N152, Granollers, Vich, Ripoll and Puigcerda. Unless a very arduous section is expected, avoid the C125 (Angles-Olot) road which joins N2 with N152. The surface in places is very bad and the main street of San Coloma de Farnes narrows to less than six feet in one place.

The Spanish-Franco border will be passed at Puigcerda and Bourg-Madame, and the highest point reached is 6,000ft at the Col de Puymorens. Do not let this high altitude be discouraging. The road gradients are very gentle except on the insides of some of the hairpin bends. Of course, if it is decided to go into Andorra by way of Port d'Envelina there is another 2,000ft of height to be surmounted, with some very steep parts.

By far the most interesting road north through France lies across the Massif Central. From the frontier town of Bourg-Madame, where one can stay in the square, take the N20 road through Ax-les-Thermes to Foix, here turning east to Quillan and north again to Limoux (try Blanquet, the local wine) and Carcassonne. North-east from this famous old city the road leads to St. Pons Bédarioux and Lodève. It is most attractive, the first part being through the ravine of Citou and later by the side of the river Orb.

At Lodève take the road for Millau, Marvejols, St. Flour, Massiac, Issoire and Clermont Ferrand. This road goes through some of the wildest scenery in France, in places very picturesque, in others unbelievably grim. Heights vary up to about 3,600ft, and there are a number of steep inclines and sharp hairpin bends. There are plenty of casual sites to be had between Millau and St. Flour, but at St. Flour both the municipal site and the town squares are rather grubby.

From Clermont Ferrand the ground falls away, and the monotony of driving over the central and northern plains of France re-asserts itself. If time permits, a sojourn in the chateaux country round Tours is rewarding—there is a nice site at Vouvray on the north bank of the Loire, and here the wine caves are well worth a visit. And, of course, before embarking at a Channel port, a few days in Paris—with all its variety and charm—are a must, so long as the expense is not prohibitive.

Those taking part in the International Rally are invited to join in a Rallye Gastronomique at Perpignan from July 28 to August 1. Those interested should write to M. Condouret, 8, rue Olivia, Perpignan, Pyrenees Orientales.

Wishbone front suspension is used by all except Gordini and Bugatti, but the execution varies. Left: Ferrari uses equal length tubular arms with horizontal swivel balls top and bottom and the transverse leaf spring captive in the lower arm. Centre: B.R.M. has fabricated unequal length arms with a horizontal swivel at the bottom and vertical one at the top. Air struts are the suspension medium. Right: Reminiscent of earlier Ferraris, the Vanwall has forged wishbones and kingpins, with combined coil spring and telescopic damper unit. The brake discs are drilled radially for lightness and cooling

G.P. Cars - Mid-season

Half-year Review on the Eve of Silverstone

WITH the present racing season more than half way through, no marque has established an overwhelming superiority in Formula I races such as was witnessed in the last two years of participation by Mercedes-Benz. This undoubtedly reflects the amount of finance available. It is impossible to obtain the facts in this matter, but without question the Stuttgart organization was able to invest astronomical sums in its racing programme by comparison with its competitors. Furthermore, had it not been possible to do so, it is doubtful whether they would have entered into competition. The vital factor in top racing is to be able to re-design, prove, and produce new parts for all cars quickly when a defect is discovered; this requires very large resources.

So far, the honours have been divided fairly evenly between Ferrari and Maserati, the latter showing to advantage on the slower circuits, while the former, with a higher maximum speed, are superior on the fast circuits. Ferrari, after their showing at Rheims, appear to have developed the original Lancia design into a reliable unit, with the engine producing more power than any of its rivals.

It is not without significance that of the Continental contenders three use eight-cylinder engines (Ferrari Vee, Gordini and Bugatti in-line), the fourth—Maserati—using a straight six engine. All the British contenders, B.R.M., Connaught and Vanwall, use a four-cylinder engine and, with the exception of the B.R.M., have the lowest piston areas. This is not of itself the be-all and end-all of engine performance, but it is a most important factor. For production of maximum power the eight-cylinder unquestionably has more inherent development possibilities, and will show up to even greater advantage with its smaller cylinder sizes if the fuel is restricted to 100-octane, which is under discussion at present by the technical committee of the F.I.A.

The day of the monster Grand Prix car is past. This is due in part to the nature of the present formula, but we have also seen a diminution in size by clever design. Although it is impossible to obtain accurate technical data on car weights and engine powers while a formula is current, observation shows the B.R.M. to be the smallest and lightest car among the current contenders. This trend will continue. If the hydro-carbon fuel is adopted, which will enable tankage capacity to be reduced (the positioning and size of which are one of the designer's biggest problems), the Formula I cars will become smaller still and approach the proportions of the new Cooper described on the following pages.

With two exceptions, the wishbone type of independent front suspension is used on all types. On his latest eight-cylinder cars Gordini uses an adaptation of the Watts link principle to obtain vertical movement of the wheels without change of wheelbase or track, thereby eliminating any gyroscopic loads. Bugatti is the only marque to scorn independent suspension. The wheels are mounted on a tubular axle, positioned by parallel, forward-facing radius arms on each side, and with a block sliding in a slot formed in the frame for lateral location. In its first outing at Rheims the car was far from stable, having a definite sideways weave at speed along the straights.

At the rear end there is more universal agreement, and the De Dion layout is used on all except the Gordini, which is the sole exponent of independent suspension, using a linkage similar to that at its front end.

Fuel injection is used only on the Vanwall (high-pressure port injection) but Maserati are experimenting with it, and the car which Moss took over from Perdisa at Rheims had the latest scheme of high-pressure direct injection, with the nozzles feeding into the cylinders under the exhaust manifolds. Connaughts have dropped their adaptation of the Hilborn-Travers type of fuel injection and, con-

BRITISH GRAND PRIX

Silverstone, July 14

Tomorrow the most important race to be staged in Great Britain this year will take place at Silverstone. The start for the British Grand Prix is at 12.30 p.m.

British, Italian and French teams, comprising Connaught, B.R.M., Vanwall, Gordini, Ferrari and Maserati cars, will be taking part in the 200-mile (100-lap) event, with the world's top drivers at their wheels.

Details of the main and supporting events are given on page 63.

In the accompanying notes, the Technical Editor brings readers up to date on features of Grand Prix cars and their showing during the first half of the racing season. Reference is also made to the new Bugatti which is not yet ready for competition and, therefore, will not be seen on this occasion at Silverstone.

YES, for six years in summer and winter alike Duckham's Q.5500 has given thousands of motorists millions of trouble-free motoring miles and they have proved to their complete satisfaction that Q.5500 does all that's claimed for it.

Free flowing at all temperatures Duckham's Q.5500 gives easier starting, longer battery life and because it provides maximum protection against wear, much greater mileage between costly decokes and overhauls. It makes more power available to do useful work and, most important, saves petrol.

Body-Building for Motorists ?

Yes, Pirelli tyre designers do precisely that. The body or carcass of every Pirelli tyre is a tough, sinewy web of pre-stretched Rayon cord. The result is a resilience and flexibility which absorbs road shocks, preserves the tread, and maintains the tyre's speed-plus-safety performance throughout the whole of its long life.

PIRELLI

mencing with their magnificent win at Syracuse last year, changed over to Weber carburettors.

Five-speed gear boxes, in which first speed is only an "under-drive" used for starting, are used by all except B.R.M. and Connaught, both of whom use four.

With the exception of Gordini, disc brakes are confined to the three British makes. The B.R.M. is unusual in having a single disc brake at the rear, mounted on the end of the transmission shaft and running at a little less than twice road wheel speed. It offers a great saving in weight but has not been completely trouble-free, and it has been necessary to provide it with a cooling duct, taken from the body side to collect the maximum amount of air.

Of the British contenders the Vanwall so far has shown the greatest promise. The new space-type tubular frame, the redesigned, lightened De Dion axle and aerodynamic form of body have greatly increased its performance from last year. The gallant efforts of Connaught, unfortunately, are frustrated by the lack of sufficient finance, and an engine developing powers which its lower half seems incapable of sustaining.

The B.R.M. has shown that it has a great potential, but has yet to prove its reliability. It is in severe trouble with valve failures. The inlet valves are enormous, something like 2½ in head diameter, designed to provide breathing at high engine speeds not yet realized because of valve spring failures. To reduce the weight the valve stems and head are hollow with the head sealed with a Belleville type of washer welded in position. Flexing of the head causes the welded joint to break, with consequent damage to pistons, head and valve gear.

It is the old story of valve size and weight against high engine speed, and valve spring stresses limited by the space available for the springs, which was one of the reasons for Mercedes adapting the desmodromic layout in their W196 engine.

The sensible step would appear to be to reduce the valve and port sizes to obtain gas flows matching the engine speeds which are set by the limitations of the springs at this stage of development. Because of its low starting line weight, the car has demonstrated that it has a power-to-weight ratio at least equal to those of its opponents.

A Cooper-Climax for Formula II

NEXT year a new racing car formula will come into being, designated Formula II. This will be in addition to the existing formulae, and will have an engine capacity limit of 1,500 c.c., the cars to run on petrol, not alcohol fuels. In anticipation of this, the British Grand Prix meeting at Silverstone tomorrow will include an event for cars in this new category. The entry includes the first British car built specifically for this class; it is the prototype Cooper-Climax.

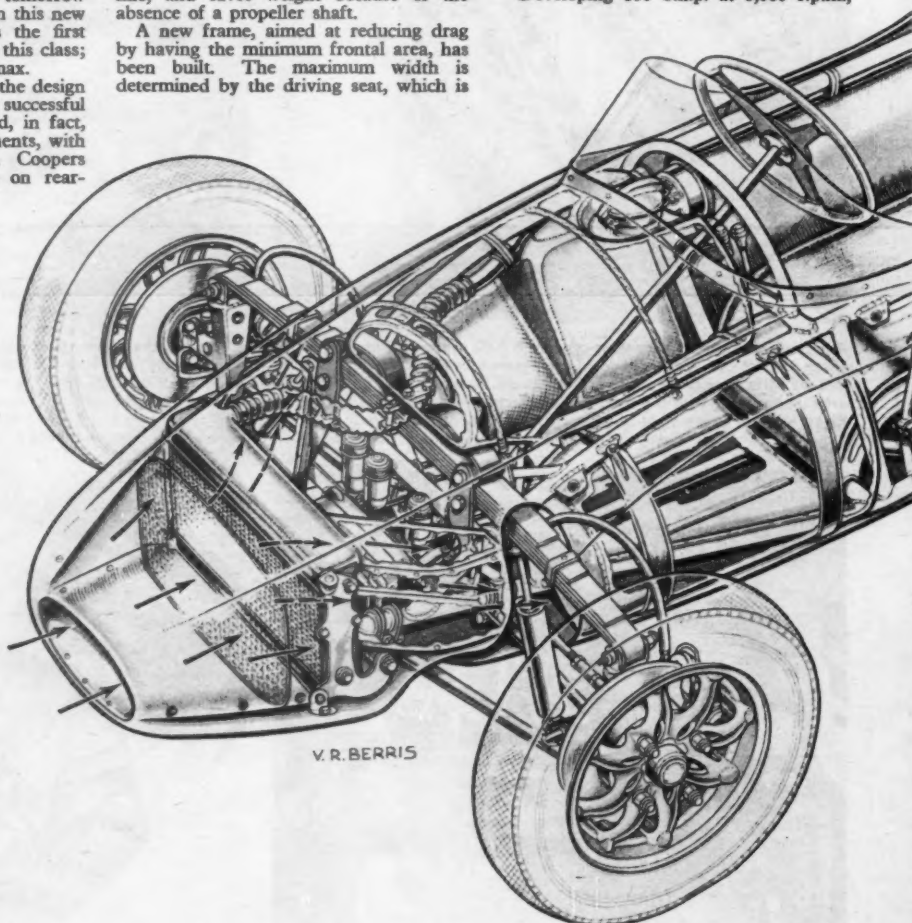

It is no surprise to find that the design follows closely that of the very successful Cooper-Climax sports cars, and, in fact, uses many of the same components, with the same wheelbase and tracks. Coopers have accumulated much data on rear-engined cars, and this position is retained on the new model. Provided that an acceptable front/rear weight distribution can be achieved, there is no doubt that the rear engine position has much in its favour. It enables a low central driving position to be obtained without the need for an offset or step-down transmission line, and saves weight because of the absence of a propeller shaft.

A new frame, aimed at reducing drag by having the minimum frontal area, has been built. The maximum width is determined by the driving seat, which is in mid-position immediately in front of the engine, and as low as the 4½ in ground clearance will permit. It is a space type frame, dimensionally and in appearance similar to that of the 500 c.c. car, and at 40 lb (bare weight) is 15 lb lighter. In the main, this is accounted for by the simpler mountings required for the in-line engine.

Developing 100 b.h.p. at 6,000 r.p.m.,

A tubular space frame of minimum width has been built for the Formula II car. Front and rear suspension units are similar to those of the rear-engined sports car, and rack and pinion steering is retained. The light-alloy radiator, carried in the hinged nose panel, is fully ducted, and exit is through side gills. The latest cast magnesium wheels have hollow spokes, which promote air flow over the brakes. Drum brakes are fitted to the prototype but Girling discs, shown here, will also be tried the 1,460 c.c. Coventry-Climax unit drives through a single dry-plate clutch to the Citroen gear box and final drive. The box contains special close-ratio, straight-cut gears, with engagement by dogs; the width of those for third and top gears have now been increased.

The control run from lever to gear box presented a problem because of the narrowness of the frame. In the sports car it occupies the space in the full-width body to the right of the driver. As a straight run was not possible in the new car, reverse motion levers on the left behind the front seat are used, and the gear lever (on the right) rotates and slides a shaft passing beneath the driving seat.

The main masses which affect weight distribution on a racing car are power unit, final drive assembly, driver and fuel; also front and rear masses should be as far apart as possible to increase the polar moment of inertia about a vertical axis. With power unit and final drive combined at the rear and a mid-way driving position, the fuel must be carried forward. In the Cooper, three fuel tanks are mounted ahead of the cockpit around the driver's legs. In front of these again are the accumulator (for coil ignition and fuel pumps) and the radiator, which also help to restore balance. It should be borne in mind, however, that fuel weight is variable between full and near-empty tanks, and that progressive lightening at the front affects the handling characteristics as the race proceeds.

Much will depend on the duration of races for Formula II cars and the amount of fuel they must carry. As alcohol is banned, consumption will be moderate and, with the Cooper, the 12 gallons capacity should be sufficient for a 200-mile race. The weight distribution with driver weighing 170 lb and five gallons of fuel in the tanks is 43 per cent front and 57 per cent rear.

Dry weight is 6 cwt 22 lb, giving 323 b.h.p./ton—a figure which, together with the low frontal area of approximately 5½ sq ft, should produce an exceptional performance. In due course, the twin-camshaft Coventry-Climax F.P.F. engine will be available, and the chassis is designed to accommodate this without any further modifications. With this engine the performance figure will become approximately 425 b.h.p./ton, which on many circuits will permit top speeds approximating to those achieved by the present Formula I cars.

ROVER 2-litre 60 SALOON

The 60, like the remaining Rover cars, has a particularly well-balanced line. In its latest form the rear window wraps round at the corners. The doors close on central pillars, which means that the rear doors are hinged at the back

WHAT does the purchaser of a quality car expect to get for his money? Most important in the list of qualities must be comfort, silence, reliability and a high standard of construction in the vehicle itself. Appearance or styling are secondary, but they must be dignified and practical. For a little higher price than is paid for the run-of-the-mill vehicle, the current Rover 60 definitely provides that extra refinement implied above. It is extremely well made, and the reputation the manufacturer has built up in the past years for good quality fittings in both interior and exterior finish shows to a high degree in this, the lowest-powered model of the range. Mechanically it is very quiet, and when travelling, road and wind noise are at a minimum. Comfort is certainly to be found in the seating arrangements, and mechanical reliability is on a par with the general high quality of the car.

The Rover Company's policy for some years now has been to provide one body size and shape, with a choice of three engine sizes. The six-cylinder 90 and 75 saloons are not easily distinguished from the four-cylinder model 60. One of the particular features common to the three engines is the use of overhead inlet and side exhaust valves. The cylinder heads are of aluminium alloy. All three models have a final drive ratio of 4.30 to 1, and the

Access is particularly easy. The gear lever is cranked to bring it conveniently to hand. The layout of the wood facia is restrained, and the instruments, lettered white and black, are easy to read. There are armrests on the doors, and folding rests are incorporated in the front and rear seats. The rear is roomy and comfortable. The support straps automatically spring out of the way when not in use. There are door pulls in addition to the armrests overall gear ratios are the same for the three engine sizes.

The 60 is intended for the owner who has no particular use for high performance and maximum speed, but who appreciates sweet running, economy and a modest taste of luxury. Those owners who mark up a higher-than-average annual mileage will be interested to know that the car performed very well on a 50-50 mixture of ordinary and first grade fuel. First grade petrol was used alone when the acceleration and maximum speed figures were being obtained.

Maximum torque is developed at 2,000 r.p.m., so the engine pulls well at low speeds, with little indication that it is a four-cylinder unit. It has the smoothness and lack of fuss associated with the maker's name, and the cruising speed is higher than one might suppose, 65 to 70 m.p.h. being held without stress if desired. Average main road gradients can be surmounted quite briskly on top gear, and highly creditable average speeds can be maintained with a fully laden car.

The 60 is very pleasant to drive in towns, the engine pulling steadily from low speeds in top gear, and for quiet progress there is no need for constant use of the gear box. For all starts from rest it is advisable to use first gear, with a change up almost immediately into second gear.

Although a free wheel is not now fitted to the Rover 90, this unit is still standard on the 60 and 75 models. Engagement or disengagement of the free wheel is a simple matter; the control, which is well placed on the fascia, is reached without stretching from the driving seat.

The control must be operated only when the car is stationary or, if on the move, when the engine is pulling, so that both components of the mechanism are rotating at the same speed before they are locked together. With the free wheel in operation it is possible to change gear without use of the clutch, so long as the car is free wheeling when the change is made. Very quick and silent gear changes can be made by this means.

When driving normally with the free wheel out of action, the usual method of using the clutch must be employed. The clutch itself is light and smooth in operation, and the angle of the pedal is just right. There is adequate room between the pedal and the gear box cover for the driver's left foot.

Rovers are unusual in using an overhead inlet and side exhaust engine design. The 60 has a 4-cylinder unit, mounted so that the oil filler and radiator cap are easy to reach. In normal driving the oil level is checked by a gauge on the fascia. The heater unit is fitted against the bulkhead

The gear box itself is quiet, and the ratios suit the weight of the car and the engine output. The gear change lever is placed centrally in the compartment, and is mounted on a turret placed above the gear box cover. It is possible to adjust the lever position to some degree, to bring it closer to or farther from the steering wheel. The lever is long and spindly, with an indefinite feel about it, and it is too easy to engage reverse gear instead of first.

The braking system incorporates two leading shoes at the front, and the effect is good. Like the clutch pedal, the brake pedal is well placed, and the driver's foot reaches it at a natural and comfortable angle. The brakes pull the car up with very little effort, and during both the brake testing and driving on the road they did not fade or become uneven. There was a tendency for the front shoes to grab when the car was being reversed.

Since the last Rover 60 was road tested by The Autocar, the hand brake lever has been re-positioned and modified. The present design is one of the best encountered on any modern car. It is easy to reach from the driving seat, it

The sidelights are fitted high on the front wings, the larger units below the headlamps being winking indicators. Fresh air is taken in through a vent at the base of the windscreen, clear of traffic fumes. The bumpers wrap round the corners, and the hole for the starting handle can be seen at the base of the radiator grille has what may be described as a "toolroom" feel about it, and it is powerful in operation. Also it does not interfere with entry into the car.

Rovers have a separate chassis frame which incorporates very sturdy cross members, and this undoubtedly plays its part in the general feeling of stability which is a characteristic of the car. On undulating roads or those with an inferior surface there is little trace of roll. The suspension is firm but without any suggestion of harshness. An anti-roll bar connects the two front hub units.

The steering is of the re-circulating ball design, with a variable ratio—that is, the gearing is arranged to lessen the effort for the driver when using full lock at very low speeds. The general impression is of lightness, with understeer apparent when travelling fast. The wheel and column angle is a well-chosen one, and the driving position is very good. It is a pleasant feeling to sit in a car and be at home in the driving seat right away.

The steering wheel, together with the angle of the seat back rest and the seat adjustment, allows a comfortably alert position to be adopted. In addition to the normal fore-and-aft adjustment of the bench-type front seat, it is possible to make alterations to the height and rake of the seat itself. There is an arm rest on the driver's side door; it is adjustable for height and can be dropped down out of the way if required.

The driving mirror provides an example of the care taken by the manufacturer to avoid those little flaws which can be so irritating. It is slightly curved, firmly mounted, takes full advantage of the wrap-round rear window, and does not interfere with forward visibility.

Switches and minor controls on some modern cars are considered more for appearance than for their efficient functioning. In the Rover one finds an exception—each lever and switch is a robust thing, and gives the impression of suitability for purpose. The main instrument panel with the circular dials clearly marked in black and white, and easily read from the driving seat, are illuminated at night by rheostatically controlled lighting. This circuit is controlled by the ignition switch.

The sidelights are mounted on top of the wings in the traditional manner, and although the advantages of modern "buried" sidelights are obvious, a Rover driver is also reminded of the desirability of being able to see if his lights are on. Their switch is panel-mounted, and a separate control on the steering column looks after the headlights. These give a satisfactory spread of illumination, and do not cause annoyance to other road users when in the dipped position.

ROVER 2-litre 60 SALOON . . .

The windscreen wipers clean a good area of the screen, they are self-parking, and neat, plated brackets prevent them from jamming below the level of the screen frame. A screen washer with foot control is part of the Rover's standard equipment.

Also a standard fitting on these cars is heating and demisting equipment which includes an auxiliary blower. Winter experience of this unit in other Rovers has shown that it is efficient.

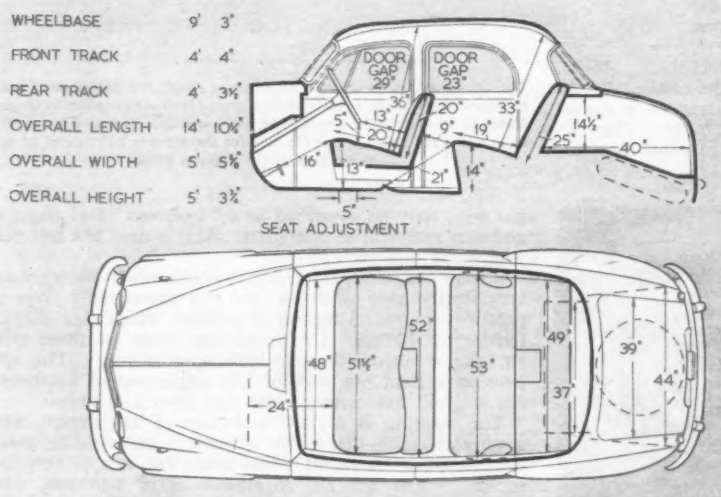

Rovers are notable for their well-finished interiors. The smart but conservative polished woodwork of the fascia, with its pleasing lack of screwheads, is balanced by the real leather of the upholstery, and the carpeting which covers the whole of the floor. The seats are very comfortable, and leg room, both in front and in the rear, is good. There is comfort for the rear passengers in the form of arm rests, pull straps in the rear quarter panels and an interior light in each corner. There is also a large ashtray in the back of the front seat.

A radio was fitted to the tested car, but when this is not supplied the space is used for a second glove box. Some drivers would appreciate a pocket to the right of the steering column, below the fascia, for dusters or maps. Apart from the items mentioned, such things as the reserve fuel supply of 1½ gallons, controlled by a switch on the fascia, and the engine oil level indicator, read off the petrol gauge by pressing a button, will be appreciated by the owner.

Amongst the mechanical features which deserve special mention is the extensive use of rubber bushes, and bearings which are pre-packed with lubricant. There are only four grease points which require attention by pressure gun.

Vacuum Cleaner

THE idea of running a vacuum cleaner for car interiors from the exhaust pipe has been developed by Horvell Products, Ltd., Red House Industrial Estate, Aldridge, Staffordshire. There is a coned tip which fits into the exhaust tail pipe. This contains a venturi which, when the engine is running, creates a strong suction. A 12ft flexible pipe connects to the plated nozzle with which the awkward corners of a car interior, its fascia locker, and so on, can be conveniently cleaned. The whole thing is strong and simple, with metal parts of solid brass, plated, and is not expensive. It costs £3.

A test was made with a Ford Popular. The exhaust from this small engine, at fast tickover and a petrol consumption of some hours to a gallon, produced a splendid suction. The nozzle would pick up coarse sand or fine dust from pile carpet. It was found that the device could be used with a square brush attachment (not provided, but borrowed from a household cleaner) for the large areas of seat covers and roof linings, where the fine dust raised by the brush was all sucked away.

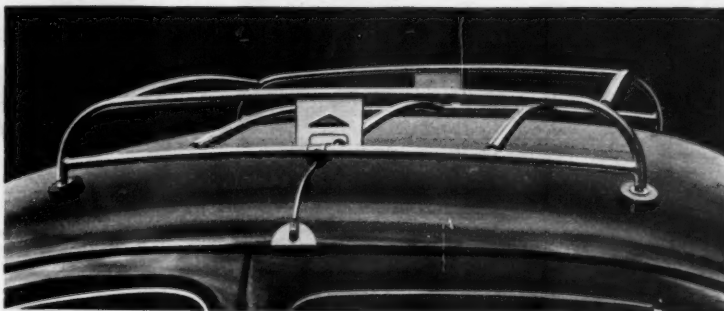

Considerable suction is developed by this exhaust-operated vacuum cleaner

Small Rack

A JUNIOR edition of the Parr Portarack, called the Portarack Minor, is introduced. It is for Austin A.30; Fiat 600; Ford Popular, Anglia and Prefect; Morris Minor; Peugeot 203; Renault 750; Standard Eight and Ten; and Volkswagen. The price is £4 12s 6d, and the makers are Parr Equipment Co., Ltd., 20, Avonmore Road, Kensington, London, W.14.

The design is strong. At the point where the clamp grips at each side there is a plate uniting top and bottom rails. The clamps have security devices, and the cross bars, slightly curved, are of ½in diameter, hard drawn steel tubing. A stoved enamel finish is either black or silver-grey. In use, the Minor is 35in long, and adjustable between widths of 34-38in. It stows away when unwanted, in a space 3ft 0½in by 7in by 5½in.

Compact Deck Chair

NATURE does not always provide comfort in her beauty spots and many motorists are taking advantage of the small folding chairs that are on the market. The Twifold chair is a new idea. It appears strongly constructed, of aluminium tubing, and is designed to fold up in a compact bundle, only 1ft 6in by 6½ and 4½in, which can occupy the odd corner in the luggage locker. The weight is 4½ lb. The chair is comfortable and the reclining angle is adjustable to three positions. It requires a reasonably solid surface to support it. The Twifold is manufactured by Martin (Spare Parts), Wolverhampton, Ltd., Raby House, Raby Street, Wolverhampton, and the price is £3 15s.

Driving Gloves

SINCE racing drivers first discovered that the ideal glove combined a string back with a leather palm, there have been many designs produced along these lines—some good and some bad. In an effort to produce a really good design, Boulton Brothers, Ltd., of Westbury, Wiltshire, have enlisted the services of Stirling Moss.

The gloves—intended to provide maximum grip of the wheel without causing undue heat—are available with either yellow washleather, tan grain or hogskin palms, and crochet backs, and are washable.

Sold as the Stirling Moss driving gloves by outfitters, they are made by Boulting Brothers (Leighbridge), Ltd., Westbury, Wiltshire. Hogskin palm models are £1 18s 6d; tan grain, £1 17s 6d; washleather palms £1 15s 6d; and ladies' model (washleather palms), £1 12s 6d.

R.A.C. First-aid Kit

A FIRST-AID kit for motorists has been sponsored by the R.A.C., Pall Mall, London, W.1. It is obtainable from the club's regional offices, and from chemists. In a tin box, 5½in by 3½in by 1½in, are contained bandages, dressings, plasters, cotton wool and antiseptic cream. There is also a booklet on first aid.

The outfit costs 7s. Postage is 1s in Great Britain.

Rest and be Thankful

Setting off for a climb taking 73.18sec is A. K. McCosh's Vintage 3-litre Bentley, with 4½-litre engine

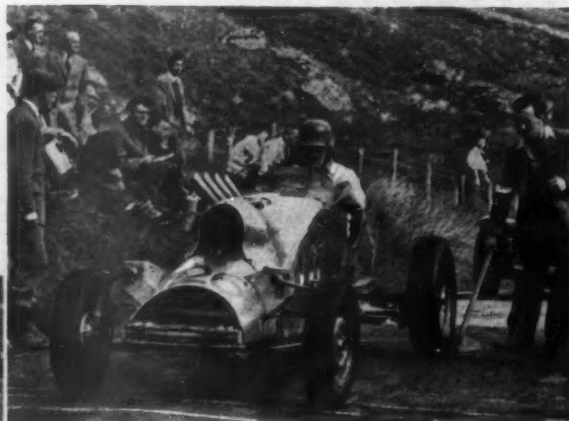

One of two lady competitors was Mrs. Agnes Mickel, who shared an M.G. A with her husband. She clocked 76.65sec

A tidy drift over Stone Bridge by A. E. Marsh in his Cooper-Climax, fastest of the sports cars in 58.88sec

On the first of his two record-breaking runs in the 1,100 c.c. Cooper-J.A.P., Marsh crosses Stone Bridge at unprecedented speed

Most spectacular special present was T. Dryver's 6.3-litre, aero-engined de Havilland-A.T.N. Its rear axle broke after its first run

Rest and Be Thankful . . .

RECORD FALLS TWICE TO TONY MARSH (COOPER-J.A.P.)

THEY tell me the Clansman Viscounts operating between London Airport and Renfrew (for Glasgow) have to hold themselves back to give the stewardess time to serve a meal, and if there's a following wind, one has to forgo the coffee. The most sophisticated Briton, if he has ever motored the length of his land, must always be faintly surprised to find himself in Glasgow within 1½ hours of leaving London, even if the timetable has forewarned him. Yet somehow the fraction of a minute it takes Tony Marsh to climb Rest and Be Thankful at under 55 m.p.h. average holds more concentrated excitement.

Over, then, to the Royal Scottish Automobile Club's one international fixture on the calendar, run on the historical old road leading up Glen Croe away from Arrochar in the direction of Inveraray. Superseded since 1941 by a wider road of gentler gradient, it is now controlled by the Forestry Commission and normally closed to the public. Up to the famous left-hander at Stone Bridge it switchbacks alarmingly, then climbs more steeply through tricky esses to another tight left-hander (Cobbler Bend) and a final right-hand hairpin on a 1 in 7.7 gradient—1,425 yards from start to finish. The old hands say that the day is won or lost on the initial, undulating stretch to Stone Bridge.

Saturday began wet and unpromising, with old Ben Lomond holding his head high in the clouds and everywhere the gurgle and gush of water flowing down to the Lowlands. Better weather from the west had been forecast, but unfortunately the first breaking of the sun through the clouds at about midday coincided with the breaking of Alastair Kerr's Kerford through the inner railings of Cobbler Bend. Kerr, a local man from Arrochar, was unhurt, but the Kerford was extricated with hoist and tackle and declared hors de combat for the afternoon.

A rather sparse entry lined up for the starter's hockey stick—only 33 competitors for the eight classes scheduled. This included none in either the 500 c.c. racing or 1,101-1,500 c.c. sports classes, two each for the 1,501-2,000 c.c. and over 2,000 c.c. racing classes, and only three sports cars between 1,501 and 2,000 c.c.—a pity, for the course is an interesting one and scenically attractive. Inevitably, Messrs. Marsh, Wharton and Christie stole the purely competitive limelight, although others spent considerably longer on the hill and had more entertaining tricks up their sleeves. Fastest on the drying course during Saturday morning practice had been Marsh, in 56.19sec.

On a surface now blown almost dry, except where water continued to seep through the tarmac—particularly just short of the final hairpin—the very first official run was quite breathtaking. Tony Marsh, very fast indeed without appearing to take a single risk, rushed his Cooper-J.A.P. up in 54.17sec, whereby he broke Wharton's 1952 record (54.23) and threw a challenge to his rivals which none could meet. Having won the first round thus convincingly, he bettered his own record again on a second run in the same car in 53.75sec, and neither Christie nor Wharton could get within 1½sec of him. He is thus firmly in the lead for the R.A.C.'s Hill Climb Championship

Not that it was Wharton's day; on a practice run in his Cooper-J.A.P. a plug lead came adrift, then the same car's gear box failed during its second climb, and finally, at his second and fastest attempt in the 2-litre E.R.A., he swung out rather wildly at the hairpin and lost valuable time. Michael Christie was precise and pretty to watch as ever in his Cooper-J.A.P., flicking over Stone Bridge without a trace too much tail drift and braking late for the hairpin, yet taking it close in—but nevertheless it was Marsh's benefit.

There were other racers to watch. A happy-looking James Berry drove his 2-litre E.R.A. Special, boasting all-independent suspension, with gusto and a thrilling whine from the blower. T. Dryver's de Havilland-A.T.N. was obviously a favourite with the spectators, not because it climbed at all quickly, but because it looked so jolly dangerous, propelling itself up the hill in riotously explosive bursts. Unfortunately, just before its second ascent became due, the locked rear axle became indifferent. Sharing the same class was J. F. Gibbon's Rover Special, with nose and tail cowlings removed to expose all its peculiarities. During a practice run a part of its gear-change mechanism broke, but was replaced with a borrowed part for the afternoon.

This machine's rear axle layout is, to say the least, unusual. Both transverse torsion bars and combined coil spring and damper units are used, together with parallel trailing arms and a form of block-and-slide to stay the axle laterally. The tuned 90 engine seems to give plenty of urge and sounds right, and his best climb took 62.63sec.

Among the sports cars, there were two husband-and-wife entries, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Mickel sharing their red M.G. A and Mr. and Mrs. R. Fielding in H.W.M.-Jaguar. In each case the male sex asserted itself. Pat Melville's handsome and unmutated 30-98 Vauxhall diced against A. K. McCosh's Bentley—a wolfed-up job with a 4½-litre engine concealed beneath 3-litre clothing—for the Vintage award, and the Vauxhall won by over 5½sec.

Tony Marsh's Manx-tailed Cooper-Climax not unexpectedly made f.t.d. for a sports car. Runner-up in the up-to-1,500 c.c. class was S. D. Nicoll, who was obviously not going to risk bending J. K. Fraser's Lotus-Climax XI. A. H. B. Craig's blown M.G.-engined Bongazoo, a nicely made little special which went and sounded as though all the Bongas in the zoo were working ones, would have provided Edward Lear with the inspiration for a fine Nonsense Rhyme.

With so few entries, the event was over all too soon, but this left the southern visitor a few hours' daylight in which to enjoy sight-seeing among the lochs; and where else but in Scotland could one afterwards rest and be thankful in a bar stocked with 13 varieties of Scotch whisky?

Battery in the Cold

Danger Point is Minus 68 Deg. An article on the 2 c.v. (May 25) says that according to R. B. and the Citroen handbook, an automobile battery freezes at  $-20$  degrees Fahrenheit. If this is so, it does not seem likely that I should have been able to start my car at all after some of the cold winter nights here in Alaska. Actually I have had relatively few starting problems down to  $-40$  degrees; the troubles begin in colder weather than that, and then only when the car is allowed to sit out in the weather unprotected for more than six hours or so.

While a good battery may lose a great deal of its power in the cold, it will not freeze, when fully charged, until the temperature is well below  $-40$  degrees. It is generally thought here in Alaska that it is at  $-68$  degrees that the battery freezes. Apart from the automobile requiring some extra attention and more frequent starts to keep it warmed up, I have not had battery troubles down to  $-58$  degrees. Obviously, a discharged battery would freeze at a relatively high temperature.

Roadworthiness Tests

Australian Opinion. The writer of "Australian Bomb" (March 23) states that before re-registration cars have to pass a roadworthiness test at a cost of 7s 6d. This is correct for New South Wales, but not in Queensland.

The idea of testing cars before re-registry is very sound, but I fear rather impracticable, knowing human nature, as nearly all government restrictions are resented and to be broken if possible. At 7s 6d a test could not be done properly—the cost would be far greater than that to do anything like a proper check, so I fear that unless some compromise can be reached with regards as to who is to pay, checking will be ineffective. If motorists were encouraged to take an interest in their cars, with regard to their own lives as well as those of others, it would not be necessary to impose any checks. But there are always people who seem to think cars can go on as long as they have petrol put in, with an occasional look at the oil. These motorists will always be a menace to the public, whether they drive the very latest or the oldest car on the road. I do really think that it is up to the individual to look after his car if he values his life and has any regard for his fellows.

Purple for Stop Lights

A Simple, Easily Learnt Code. Under "Construction and Use" (June 29) you announce "red only" for stop lights, so that when we see amber we shall, without conscious effort, know that turning is indicated.

In daylight a red light visible at the rear cannot raise any doubts—it can only mean "stopping." But at night, do two red lights always mean only two rear lights? If one is lucky enough to see them suddenly increase in intensity, then one knows that they have also taken on the additional meaning of "stopping." But if one does not see that sudden increase one does not know that they are, in fact, meaning two things instead of one. And if one sees them suddenly decrease in intensity, then one knows that they were also meaning "stopping," though the sudden decrease means that they are now no longer doing so.

The remedy? (a) Rear lights to be well separated from stop lights (which means measurements specified, and so more  $\frac{1}{4}$  in offences!) and limited to two, so that more than two red lights at the rear must mean stopping. But surely more "natural" for the beholder's reaction is—even at the risk of innovation—at least to authorize purple for stop lights (the rather light "electric" purple of some pre-war mascots was piercing and visible over substantial distances).

Then, red for rear, amber for turning, purple for stopping—a simple, easily learnt code, producing virtually automatic reactions in the beholder.

Cross Hands Technique

Experience on the Skid Pan. Those correspondents who can see no wrong in crossing their hands would greatly benefit from a little practice on a skid pan. It is not so much during normal cornering as in skid correction that it is imperative not to entwine one's hands like spaghetti; and it is only by constant practice that one is not caught out in an emergency.

I have had the privilege of taking my A.30 on the police skid pan at Hendon, and found that I soon got in a pretty pickle if I crossed my hands—and an A.30 is only 2½ turns from lock to lock. I feel that Mr. G. W. Pell would have to have india-rubber arms to cope in his 6/80!

Bird Scarers

Appeal for Audible Warning. I am sure that most motorists like birds and are sorry when they hit one on the road. If a bird suddenly flies out of the hedge into the side of your car there is little you can do about it. On the other hand, many die because they fly away too late from something on the road which has been engrossing their attention. When birds are seen on the road, might I appeal to drivers and riders to sound their horns? In my experience, birds which have not heard any car approaching have, time and time again, flown away and saved their lives, on hearing the horn used earlier rather than later.

Seed Packet Technique?

Pictorial Misrepresentation Alleged. It is probable that many prospective buyers of the small saloon car class could be led astray by the coloured pamphlets illustrating the latest models. The manufacturers appear to have disproportioned the scale of the illustrations in such a way that there is a large discrepancy between the drawing and the model itself, e.g., the rear seat seems to be capable of accommodating four or five people, the leg-room to be beyond belief, and there to be enough head-room to satisfy a tall man wearing a top-hat!

As it is normal for a buyer to test the car in order to weigh up the pros and cons for each model before actually deciding on a purchase, there appears to be no advantage to the motor industry in giving the public such pictorial misrepresentations as, in fact, they seem to do.

Spare Parts the Trouble

U.S. Experience with British Car. I will not pretend that I know the problems of your car manufacturers, but I do know the problems of the British car consumer, as I am now on my second English car (a very popular $3,000 sports car) and my wife is still in the process of trying to wear out her first, a very reliable 1949 Austin with over 100,000 miles on the odometer.

Perhaps readers would be interested in my personal experiences with my sports model which, I assure you, are not unique to me.

I purchased this car in June, 1954, and after the careful break-in that any fine car should have, I used it for pleasure driving, rallies, and just plain driving to my place of employment. Pride of ownership prevented me from treating this car too roughly and so it has kept its good appearance even up to today.

At 6,000 miles this car refused to start one morning, and investigation showed that the brush springs in the starter had rusted away. Now my troubles started. No dealer in the area—and that included New York and Boston—had a starter end plate, thus forcing me to buy a complete new starter.

At approximately 10,000 miles the car refused to engage over-drive. Nothing could be found wrong, and when reassembled it worked perfectly, but there were still labour charges of about twenty dollars to pay.

At 12,000 miles, the silencer was punctured and then torn off. No new muffler was available. It was about three weeks before one was found, and that came from a friend who had changed his for a quieter model.

I then had a period of relative quiet until 24,000 miles—last March. At this time the car seemed to be settling very low on the rear, and investigation showed that four leaves of the left rear spring and one leaf of the right rear spring were broken. Alas! there were no new springs available. It was to be twenty-one days before I climbed behind the wheel of my car again. And the price for springs and labour? Seventy dollars. The car has now been in the garage for twenty-seven days because of a broken gear in the gear box. No gears are available and none is as yet in sight. Service? Does this answer or help to answer the question of dwindling sales?

Dogs at Race Meetings

An Unhappy Experience. Your correspondent, Mr. A. D. Cooper (June 22), who feels that it will be very difficult to turn away someone who had paid 25s entrance money—just because he had brought a dog—obviously does not fully realize how serious this problem is.

On one occasion we had the misfortune of having a spectator's dog run across the track during a race meeting we held on the Brough Aerodrome circuit. There were a number of spills, fortunately with only minor injuries, and the dog itself was killed. Since then we ourselves have had no compunction in turning away spectators who bring their dogs with them. The local kennels do an excellent trade on the day we hold race meetings.

Programme for a Bull Terrier. I am an English Bull Terrier and my name is Spike; I enjoy going to race meetings and I am quite sure that I have never caused anyone the slightest trouble. This is due to the fact that I have trained my master and mistress properly and, when we reach the event, they park the car in a shady spot, open the windows enough for me to be sure of having adequate fresh air, lock the doors so that no silly person can let me out by mistake, and then leave me sitting happily in the driving seat where I can gaze with interest and/or contempt at the odd characters and cars which frequent such events. My master and mistress are also trained to return at reasonable intervals in order to give me a drink (I've noticed they join me in this pastime) and also food, if it is a long day out—then they take me for a tour of inspection of trees and hedges, BUT they put me on a leash; I am most obedient to commands and don't really need the leash, but I understand that this is done in order to avoid even the faintest chance of my causing a disturbance of any kind, and I accept it as the only restriction in a very pleasant day out.

I do not appreciate the suggestion that I should be left to the care of neighbours and watch a cricket match; when I am in charge of the house I do not allow even my best friends to enter and, although I have a natural appreciation of the game of cricket, I far prefer to go to motor events as I am interested in cars more than in cricket.

In view of the exemplary behaviour of my master and mistress in learning their training so ably, I think that Mr. Cooper should reconsider his solution to the "problem" and start a training establishment for dog owners. I would also like to take this opportunity of assuring him that, should I see him at any future event, he need not fear that I shall bear him any grudge for his remarks—but I shall almost certainly give him a very nasty look.

Tubeless Tyres

When the Driver is Left Flat. I read in the Press of an unfortunate incident when an irate resident of Ascot is said to have let the air out of tyres of cars parked near his house. While behaviour of this sort is rare among adults, it is by no means unknown among children, and prompts me to wonder how a victim should set about becoming "airborne" again if his car is fitted with tubeless tyres.

Assume that the car has tubeless tyres on all wheels, all deflated, that it is night and the nearest garage aid is many miles away. The car has the usual maker's tool kit. It is raining steadily. A brief inspection confirms that the beads of all the tyres have been forced away from the wheel rims by the weight of the car. The only solution that I can think of involves sleeping in the car, or is there an easier way? Perhaps one of the manufacturers of tubeless tyres can give an answer.

Petrol Consumption

Ford Pilot Owner Seeks Advice. Has any reader any practical experience of a proved way of improving petrol consumption of a Ford Pilot? My car, 1951 model, has given five years' trouble-free motoring; mileage is 59,000. The engine has never once been touched and oil consumption now naturally is mounting.

Tests, properly carried out, indicate a petrol consumption of 17.2 m.p.g., whether the cheapest or the dearest petrol is used. I have heard of claims of 20 to 23 m.p.g. but have never found anyone able to substantiate such a claim.

Incidentally, the body is in a remarkably good state, and the chromium parts, except for the bumpers, quite devoid of any signs of rusting—altogether a remarkable car, despite its thirst! Chesham, Buckinghamshire.

Removed Accelerator Pump Link. Some time ago, for reasons entirely unconnected with carburation, I removed the accelerator pump linkage from my 1952 Austin A.70 and there seems little difference in my motoring (mainly town) except a better petrol consumption figure. The last 100 gallons covered 2,286 miles; the previous 300 gallons covered 6,450, viz. 2,160, 2,100 in the coldest weather, and 2,190.

At Boiling Point

Odd Experience with a Vanguard. I am experiencing a curious trouble with the pressurized cooling system of my Phase II Standard Vanguard.

The trouble is an apparent stoppage in the cooling system which, of course, results in overheating and eventual boiling. The effect is as though the circulation has been interrupted, for the top of the radiator is very hot indeed while the bottom and the bottom hose connection is quite cold or only tepid. This apparent stoppage is spasmodic. Sometimes the car goes without trouble for days and at other times I have to stop several times in an hour.

The thermostat was first suspected and replaced but without any improvement. Next the cooling system was flushed under high pressure by the local main agents, but this did not help. By accident I noticed that if the radiator cap was removed while the engine was idling, then the circulation immediately commenced and the temperature dropped to normal. The experiment of removing the radiator cap with one hand while holding the bottom hose with the other has been repeated many times by myself, and the rush of hot water through the bottom hose can always be felt immediately. Following up this experiment, I arranged that the suction valve in the centre of the radiator cap was held open by a loop of wire, so keeping the system at atmospheric pressure. With this arrangement I covered 500 miles without any rise of temperature at all.

The manufacturers apparently did not have an explanation that would fit the facts. They stated that the radiator cap could have no effect on the circulation and suggested that I return the cap to normal. This I did, and the engine boiled within the first two miles of running. At the suggestion of the local main agents, who have been most interested and helpful throughout, I replaced the cap with a new one but, alas, the thermometer was soon creeping up to the danger mark again.

I have soluble oil in the radiator water in order to cure a chronically squeaking water pump, but I cannot imagine that this can affect the circulation. At the present time I am running with the suction valve propped open again, and with this arrangement the engine runs below its normal temperature.

Shocks All Round

Sliding into the Seat. I have been experiencing a similar build-up of static as it would seem has caused Mr. Fenn to jump (June 8). I have established that the build-up is created by my clothing sliding over the car seat and can be caused by merely sliding into the car and out again, and then I may discharge myself into the car, another car, or any other good earth.

One cure is to wear shoes which are not good insulators, and the charge then earths simply. Also, I have found it an advantage to hold on to a metal part of the car during the process of getting out of the car, rather than sliding out and earthing the whole charge at once on shutting the door.

Shocks Only From Clean Cars. As a motor vehicle salesman I spend a fair proportion of the working day in and out of cars of various types. I have experienced shocks only from perfectly clean cars. I have no explanation for this, and am quite content to leave this particular phenomenon for the scientists to ponder.

I have now successfully overcome this annoying shocking by using a different method of getting out of a car. First of all I let go of the bakelite or plastic steering wheel and grasp some part of the door firmly. I retain this hold of the door whilst I swing my feet out of the car and on to the ground. To shut the door, of course, I have to let go of the inside and grasp the outer door handle, but so far, though this was the stage at which I was shocked formerly, by using the method described I have got away "shock free" so to speak.

Incidentally, I always wear rubber-soled shoes.

Static—and in Leather Shoes. Your correspondents (June 22) blame crepe-rubber soles for "static" shocks. I am frequently subjected to these shocks, and recently when tendering toll at the Mersey Tunnel at Liverpool, both the booth operator and myself received such a violent kick that the coins were flung into the air. My shoes are made entirely of leather, as were the operator's footwear. Shocks from vehicles entering the Tunnel are quite common, I am told, particularly from heavier transport. One never seems to experience this when alighting from public transport, coaches and the like. I wonder why?

Parking Meters

The Practice in New Zealand. I have just read about the system of metered parking to be introduced when a survey of parking in inner London is complete. The usual charge for metered parking here is 3d per half-hour, and the motorist may buy up to two hours' parking at a time, according to the type of meter in use. There is no restriction on the time one may park one's car, and no risk of having it carted away to a police dump if one's time is up.

Since meters were introduced in Auckland three years ago, they have considerably eased the parking problem, although this may be due partly to the reluctance of some motorists to pay for parking. They have been beneficial in other cities where they have been brought in, particularly in Hamilton.

It seems that New Zealand motorists are considerably better off than those in Britain, since annual licence fees, including third-party insurance and cost of registration plates (issued every five years) or stickers, amount to just over £5 for private cars, and purchase tax on new cars is only 20 per cent. In addition, all taxation on motoring is paid into a special fund used for roading and the like only. British motorists may be able to find some consolation in the fact that in some Australian States licence fees amount to £40 or £50 a year, however.

Auckland, New Zealand.

Appeal from an Invalid. Under this heading on June 29 was published a letter from a 13-year-old boy, a semi-invalid and a motoring enthusiast, requesting motoring literature, catalogues and the like. There has been a remarkable response, and the Editor desires to express appreciation of the kindheartedness of our readers.

SPORTS GRAND PRIX AT ROUEN

Three Astons in the First Five at Essarts: Chapman's
Convincing 1,500 Win

AFORETASTE of Le Mans was provided at the new Rouen-les-Essarts circuit last Sunday afternoon when two outstanding sports car events were fought out in the heat of a brilliant afternoon. Leading drivers and stables took part in the two races of which the first—up to 1,500 c.c. capacity—was for the Coupe Delamare-Debouteville, with class F, G, and H capacity subdivisions and the second was the Ve Grand Prix Internationale de Vitesse for 3-litre cars.

The fast, new permanent circuit, 6.542 kilometres (4.064 miles) long, takes in a section of N138, leading to Rouen from the south-west. The surface is excellent, and the black tarmac stands out starkly between the white bevelled kerbs. Minor exceptions to this condition are the few smooth cobbles to be found at the Virage du Nouveau Monde, the U-turn at the Elbeuf extension and the Virage des Essarts off N138. The rolling, heavily wooded area of Essarts provides beauty, shade and natural grandstands. Both for drivers and spectators this must be among the best road tracks in Europe; one heard such remarks as "When you are on a circuit like this, you realize how much we are missing with our makeshift affairs at home."

By agreement, Moss and Salvadori did not drive in the Coupe D-D, saving their energies instead for the Grand Prix. This was a wise precaution, in view of the small interval between races and the unusually hot day.

Up to 1,500 c.c.

Of the strong British contingent in Lotuses and Coopers, Colin Chapman had been fastest in practice in his 1½-litre car, with Allison making best time for the 1,100s. Several others had been very close to record times and there was every promise of a spanking race when the two dozen cars lined up on the narrow grid. On their left was the new permanent stand, ahead the footbridge and on the right the control tower and pits with the pit area, its long approach indicated by a yellow dividing line.

As the flag dropped the cars drew off precisely, like a platoon, there being little room at first to do more than keep stations. Long before the leaders were due, eyes searched up the road. Who would be first? It was not one car that came into view but a whole bunch. The expected battle was on. Harry Schell was just ahead of Colin Chapman with Phil Hill's Cooper hard on the tail of the second Lotus. Then it was Macdowell and, most creditably, both Allison and Mike Hawthorn up with the 1,500s and, of course, leading their own 1,100 class. The throaty de Chagny Porsche was followed by a second of the make and, pressing them hard, the cheeky red Ferry-Renault, well ahead of the other 750s.

Coopers, Maserati, Alfa, D.B.s gagged not far behind; Jopp in the Moss Cooper was already missing and it was soon learned that he had flipped the car, happily without injury to himself.

By lap two the terrific pace of the leaders had already carried them well out in front, and it was again Schell, Chapman, Hill, Macdowell in the first bunch; Allison and Hawthorn still just behind, then, with an appreciable gap, the two Porsches. Schell and Chapman together set up a record lap of 146.553 k.p.h. (91.05 m.p.h.).

First changes to this order came in lap 4. Schell had suddenly dropped to fourth place. Chapman, now leading, lapped the tail-enders; the Veuillet Porsche retired at the pits. Phil Hill, in second place, blew up in smoke—as a following competitor described it—when a rod came out. By now the rest of the field was already very spread out, and the Lotuses and Coopers were demonstrating their superiority and speed.

Meanwhile Hawthorn, fifth, began losing ground on Allison and in lap 8 went out with gear box trouble. Macdowell when lying in second place, had to call in with oil pressure missing, but he was able to get going again—very well. Blache also came in briefly with his remarkable Ferry-Renault and he was luckier, being able to make up the deficit for a well-deserved second place in his class, at a speed sufficient to give him ninth overall.

Chapman, Allison and Schell now settled down in the lead with the two remaining Porsches next on the list, even though they had both been lapped by the 11th time round. Hemard's little Monopole Panhard and the Berger Maserati were pressing on gamely and consistently behind them. That was how it finished, at the end of the 1hr 15min duration of the race.

Chapman was way ahead, and well deserved the flowers, kisses and photography which might have overwhelmed a lesser victor after a long, hot race. Behind him came Allison in the 1,100 c.c. car, second overall and, of course, class G winner. Schell's made the third Lotus in the winning line-up. A Porsche finished third in class F and fourth overall. Macdowell's fast Cooper could climb back only to sixth in its class, but the 1,100 Cooper, driven by Towse, managed a second place behind Allison. Sixteen cars survived the course.

The Big Race

No sooner had the Delamare-Debouteville victory celebrations finished than the big fellows started rolling out on to the track. They had been giving warming-up tongue in the paddock even before the first race had finished. And a remarkably fine line-up it was, with the three red cars on the front line—Castellotti's Ferrari, and Behra's and Perdisa's Maseratis. Behind them were Moss and Collins who had swapped Astons to give Moss No. 14 with drum brakes—the old car they called it—and Collins taking over one of the Borrani-wheeled, disc-brake cars, wishing all the same that he was driving behind drums.

Tony Brooks' Aston split the Ferraris, Hill and Schell up, on the third line, and so the reds, blues and greens stretched down the road to a total of 21. At the tail-end were two forlorn and standard-looking 300SLs, which were to prove hopelessly outclassed. Buried in the middle of the grid was the solitary 3-litre Jaguar, driven by Titterton, which made an encouraging and consistent showing. In all it was 8 Ferraris (Castellotti and Schell in the works 4-cylinder 750s), 5 Maseratis, 4 Aston Martins, a brace of Mercs, the Jag and a Gordini.

What a glorious roar marked their departure as the flag dropped. The thumb and finger signs of Moss and Collins a second or two earlier became clear as they tried at once to outflank the front row, the one by taking to the pit stretch,

Getting away from the grid. Collins goes left on the road verge and Moss takes the pit area, right, in trying to pass Castellotti, Behra and Perdisa, who had the front row. the other to the track verge. As it turned out, almost everyone remained in the first-lap bunch, staying, except for the Mercedes, hardly more strung out than at the start.

First one saw no more than distant specks. A red car led, then came green, then another red. It was Maserati, Aston, Ferrari. Perdisa, Collins and Hill were in front; right behind were Moss and Behra, Castellotti, Salvadori and Brooks. Quicker than they could be recognized, they and the rest were past and disappeared round the right-hand downhill curve beyond the footbridge.

In little more than two and a half minutes, they were round again, with Moss now third behind Collins and the first eight cars still no more than a second or two apart. The Schell four-cylinder and de Portago V-12 Ferraris were still up there, too.

Lap 6 saw dramatic changes when Collins took the lead and put a green car in front for the only time. Behra came up into second position and Moss was fourth behind Perdisa. The later cars were also sorting themselves out by now, with lengthening gaps between Hill and de Portago and especially between Salvadori and the blue Lucas Ferrari. Salvadori found himself down at unlucky 13th instead of swelling the first bunch, as a result of a temporary brake seizure. He was able to free it on the circuit without going into the pits. The 300SLs had already been lapped by the six leaders.

At 15 laps the position seemed to be stabilizing, with Behra slowly increasing his lead on Perdisa and he on Moss. Castellotti was fourth and Collins, falling back, was making his last appearance before retiring with undiagnosed vibrations in gear box or transmission. Salvadori was slowly but surely climbing again. Titterton was gaining on Musy and Musy on de Portago, the four having a good private dice at this time. Several of the slower cars had spent time at the pits, including the Whitehead green Maserati.

Half-distance saw Moss back in fourth position, with Castellotti ahead of him and Tony Brooks also closing. The V-12 Portago Ferrari came in for oil, but quickly left without losing much ground. The Gordini and Godia's Maserati ceased the struggle, the former in view but stationary up the road, the latter at the pits.

Time and cars now passed almost monotonously until the 37th lap, when Perdisa rolled unexpectedly into the pits and retired for reasons unstated. A pity; eight laps earlier he had set a new record at 153.628 k.p.h. (95.45 m.p.h.).

Almost at once it seemed that Castellotti had decided to turn on the heat but the watches showed that in fact it was Behra who was slowing down. Castellotti started to close and Moss likewise, and suddenly a rash of pit signals came out.

Obviously Behra, with his commanding lead, was slowing down in an ominous way and he still had some ten laps to go to the finish. Like wolves the Ferrari, second, and Aston, third, went after the wounded Maserati. It was possible that one, two or even three British cars might steal places here. Closing fast, first Castellotti took Behra on the 44th after passing the stands, wheels overlapping; Moss was past on the 45th.

Racing in the bright sun, Tony Brooks misread his signal in the deep shade of the pits and did not heap on the coals in time. Salvadori, doing his utmost, passed Hill's Ferrari with five laps to go; a little farther back, Titterton was gaining fast on the Musy Maserati and, in fact, displaced him on the 47th lap.

Even more exciting, Moss was in full cry after Castellotti, closing several seconds a lap and both appearing on the grid straight together with three laps to go. But it was just too much to ask of the Aston Martin, and the last lap was finished with Castellotti holding on to his lead by just 4.9 seconds.

Behra made third place, with 10 seconds in hand over Brooks. Many had thought that he was short of a gear but, in fact, it was a damaged rear suspension which had so drastically trimmed his speed. Salvadori, a lap behind the winners, put a third Aston into the first five cars and Titterton, also a lap short, brought another British car in seventh behind the Hill Ferrari.

Once again anthems, flowers and kisses followed as the huge crowd inundated the track, an excited buzz of conversation having taken over from the now silent engines. This had been a sports car Grand Prix to remember.

CAR CARRIES ON IN SAFETY

After a 3,758 mile journey from Ostend to Basrah, Flt.-Lt. E. A. T. Hall writes from R.A.F. Station Shaibah:

"The journey from Ostend to R.A.F. Habbaniyah was completed in 9 days 1 hour, a distance of 3,758 miles, including about 50 miles for deviations, etc. On each of four of these days I was able to drive 500 miles or more and always kept the speed at 60 m.p.h. I think we went through almost every kind of weather conditions, ice, snow, fog, rain, mud and ending on the dusty desert of Iraq.

We experienced no difficulty on the hard-packed snow on the mountain roads in Austria and Turkey. In some parts of Yugoslavia I was still able to achieve and maintain a speed of between 40 and 50 m.p.h. on soft snow six to twelve inches deep. I thought I would have to use the spade south of Baghdad, where the road was mud with ruts up to 18" deep, but I got through, passing three lorries that were stuck fast.

I should estimate that the car was loaded as it would be if five adults of average weight were carried and our petrol consumption for the whole journey was a little over 30 m.p.g.

You will see by the enclosed photograph the damage to the nearside front wheel which occurred when it hit a large stone whilst I was overtaking a large lorry in clouds of dust.

My speed was about 65 m.p.h. at the time but even so I went half a mile before the tubeless tyre was deflated. I feel sure that a tyre with inner tube would have burst with such rough treatment."

SILVERSTONE TOMORROW ASTON MARTIN DATE THE G.P. BUGATTI

THERE WAS A TIME when Silverstone seemed to be on the wane and a succession of Italian-dominated races, supported by lesser events in which the competition was nothing like so keen as it is now, threatened to lose the public's interest. Now each new meeting holds greater promise than the last, and tomorrow's should be the finest yet.

The ninth R.A.C. British Grand Prix has works entries from Vanwall, B.R.M., Connaught, Ferrari, Maserati and Gordini, together with a full field of one-off entries. Two of the three B.R.M.s entered will be driven by Mike Hawthorn and Tony Brooks; the third driver is likely to be either Ron Flockhart or Ken Wharton. The Vanwall trio will comprise Trintignant, Schell and another not yet named. Scuderia

Ferrari will field five cars (Collins, Fangio, Castellotti, Gendebien and the Marquis de Portago) and, in addition to four works Maseratis (Moss, Behra, Perdica and Godia), there are eight individual Maserati entries: Villoresi, Maglioli, Volonterio, Rosier, Brabham, Salvadori, Gould and Halford.

Four works Connaughts will be in the hands of Scott-Brown, Titterton, Fairman and another, while Manzon and da Silva Ramos have been nominated by Gordini. Emery has entered his own Emeryson Special and Gerard his faithful bored-out Cooper-Bristol. The race will cover 101 laps, or about 303 miles.

THE PROSPECTS of a really first-class race are almost too good to be true, and there will be many who will wish Peter Collins another high score towards the World Championship. On the other hand, it is even more important that one of our own G.P. cars should defeat the strong Italian opposition, whether it be a Vanwall, B.R.M. or Connaught. A repeat for Vanwall of that make's run-away victory at the May 5 meeting would be a fine tonic, but this time Tony Vandervell will not have Stirling Moss to drive for him.

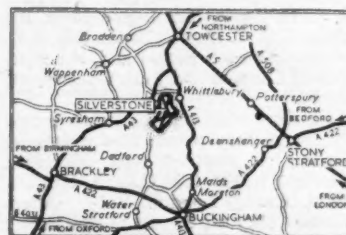

The B.R.M. team, captained by the irrepressible Mike Hawthorn (who, it will be remembered, led the May 5 race until mechanical troubles intervened), may again find themselves the fastest cars on the course, but no race can be won unless the machine can keep its tune to the bitter end. Now solid inlet valves are fitted, in view of troubles with the fickle hollow type—reliability vice revs.

The 25-lap (75-mile) international Formula 2 race, which starts the day's programme, was introduced to give racing car manufacturers an opportunity to test designs for next year's 1½-litre formula. Roy Salvadori will thus be seen in the first-off of the new single-seater Coventry Climax-engined Coopers. Other works Coopers will be the familiar clipped-tail two-seaters, all with 1½-litre Climax engines. Nominated drivers are Macdowell and Brabham. Bueb and Hawthorn will handle the Ecurie Demi-Litre's Cooper-Climax and Lotus-Climax respectively, Brooks has been chosen by John Coombs to drive his Connaught and the works team of Lotus cars comprises Chapman, Bicknell and Allison.

A 25-lap sports car race, following the Grand Prix, is divided into three classes (1,501-2,000 c.c., 2,001-3,000 and over 3,000). Moss has been entrusted with a works 3-litre Maserati, Wharton and Hill works Ferraris of 3 and 3½ litres respectively, Mackay Fraser has the Scuderia Bonnier's 3½-litre Ferrari and Bonnier himself a 3½-litre Alfa-Romeo. Ecurie Ecosse has listed three Jaguars, of which one has the Wilkinson-modified 3-litre engine. Titterton and Sanderson are the only drivers yet named for them. Hamilton has entered his own D-type Jaguar, there are five privately entered Aston Martins—one to be driven by

The Formula 3 race, to complete the programme, will cover 17 laps (about 51 miles). There will be 29 Coopers taking part, plus one each Staride, Petty and Martin. The only works-entered Cooper will be in Jim Russell's hands, but he will have stiff opposition from Parker, Bueb, Lewis-Evans, Davis and others.

The meeting is organized by the British Racing Drivers' Club and sponsored by the Daily Express.

I WONDER WHY the wrap-round screen and high-sided cockpit of, for instance, the Vanwall has not been more widely adopted by the European makers of G.P. cars. It must surely be aerodynamically more efficient, and indeed more comfortable for the driver so long as his cockpit is well ventilated from other sources. It is accepted practice among most sports car racing car designers, Lotus, Cooper and Jaguar to name but three. Those cars are sometimes on the move almost without a break for 24 hours, although granted not without a change of driver. Yet I noticed at Rheims that the winning Ferraris had the tiniest of screens, and the new Bugatti likewise. Memo: must ask Peter Collins what he thinks about this.

RED LETTER DAY for the Aston Martin O.C. will be Saturday, July 21, when the club's annual Silverstone meeting will include a parade of Aston Martins to mark the 35th anniversary of the original company's foundation. Among many famous cars it will include several from the pre-Bertelli period, two of the o.h.c. G.P. de Voiturette racers of 1921, Commander Attwood's familiar Razor Blade and many examples of the pre-war 1½- and 2-litre cars. The post-war period will also be well represented, and among the drivers will be many who have helped to make Aston Martin history, S. C. H. Davis, Kensington Moir, Pat Driscoll, J. C. Elwes, Claude Hill, A. C. Bertelli, Gordon Sutherland, the Marquis of Camden and John Wyer among them.

THE NEW BUGATTI, in its first race at Rheims, showed the need for much more development before it can compete with cars which already have had two years' racing experience; it is not surprising, therefore, that it should be absent from Silverstone. The layout is ingenious, but the use of a beam axle at the front is hard to understand, and one has the impression that the chassis and power unit have been the work of separate departments. Most disappointing was the workmanship, which was not up to pre-war Molsheim standards.

The straight-eight engine is mounted transversely behind the driver. Cylinders are in two blocks of four with, between them, the gear drive to the camshafts and transmission; the crankshaft also is in two parts. The transmission, bolted direct to the engine crankcase, is a constant layshaft type, and the open running clutch is on the left-hand side of the car. A final spur gear transmits the drive through exposed shafts to the wheels on the de Dion axle. As there are no corners to turn, all gears are straight spurs.

A simple frame construction is used, with an upper and lower tube along each side, the lower ones larger in diameter; they carry water from the radiator at the front to the engine. Carburation is by four twin-choke 42mm Weber horizontal carburettors.

Disc brakes of Bugatti manufacture have been planned, but the car raced, with the shoe type in light-alloy drums, fitted outboard at front and rear. Fuel tanks are amidships—one each side of the driver between the frame tubes.

The track is 4ft 3in, and at 7ft 2in the wheelbase is 3in less than that of the very short Cooper-Climax rear-engine sports car. This, in conjunction with a low front-end weight, may explain its difficult handling.

A CHANGE OF DATE for the next International Hill Climb at Shelsley Walsh brings it forward from Sunday, August 26, to Saturday, August 25. This event qualifies for the R.A.C. British Hill Climb Championship, the Junior Hill Climb Championship and the Autosport Sports Car Championship. There will also be classes for motor cycles, both solo and with side-car. Entry forms may be obtained from the Secretary, the Midland Automobile Club, 184, Bath Row, Birmingham 15.

SACKCLOTH AND ASHES. In the report of the Rheims race last week it was stated that Schell had exceeded the safe speed limit of his Vanwall engine by a large margin in his magnificent attempt to overhaul Fangio, in which he very nearly succeeded. In fact, he had gone only 200 revs "over the top"—which is nothing at all. The real cause of the retirement was a broken ball-joint in the linkage from the throttle to the rack of the fuel injection pump. This was replaced at the pit, but the accurate settings could not be adjusted in time, and that was the reason for his engine being off the beat in his last laps. Sorry, Harry!! Here's hoping that no gremlins peer over your shoulder tomorrow.

THE VETERAN CAR CLUB has 61 entries for next Saturday's speed trials at Hastings. The competitors will first rally at Park Cross Road, arriving there not later than 10.30 a.m. One entrant, R. D. Gregory, will be starting from Slough and travelling via Edinburgh in his 1904 Darracq. Another, S. J. Humphries (1914 Perry), will journey first from Woking to Aberdeen en route for Hastings. Most powerful car entered is D. Fitzpatrick's 1910 Métallurgique, with 21-litre Maybach engine, which will be driving down from Norfolk. Two foreign visitors will be Messrs. Schimp and Schoof, from Belgium and Germany respectively, who were both over here last year for the V.C.C.'s Jubilee Rally. The speed trials will be run on Upper Park Road, commencing at 2.45 p.m., and one of the stewards is Mrs. S. F. Edge, widow of the famous pioneer racing driver who won the 1902 Gordon Bennett race and later took long-distance records at Brooklands.

"Where this V8 BMW really came into its own was on the autobahns, for it would go up to maximum speed with no sound from the engine to give any indication of the power being developed... fully laden the car could be kept on full throttle for mile after mile, showing no signs of distress. After a visit to Stuttgart a return was made to Munich by way of the autobahn and in the dark the speedo. was kept on 170 k.p.h. for most of the way, often going to 190 k.p.h. (112 m.p.h.), the journey taking just over two hours. The lights were adequate for such speeds and the comfort such that all except the driver slept soundly."

The 234 is a new kind of Armstrong Siddeley:
The most exciting car of the year

The 4 cyl. Sapphire 234 is a sports car and it handles as a sports car should. Well over 100 m.p.h.; rest to 60 in 12.8 secs.; and on top of it all, an unbelievable 30 m.p.g. (D. W. Ellred won his class on a Sapphire 234 in the recent Mobilgas Event).

Finished to aircraft standards, here is the car of the year: comparable with anything the world can produce. And the price is only £1411. Our demonstration car is at your disposal anywhere. You can drive it yourself as fast as you like—why not use it for your next long run?

Another Batch of Paramounts has just Arrived

The Paramount at £795 all-in is the World's Best Value. Previously priced at £1,013, the Paramount is a full 4 seater sports convertible with wind-up windows and a disappearing hood. Or there is an alternative hard-top saloon.

Ford Consul Engine (or 10 h.p. if you wish) and gearbox plus other proprietary components ensure reliability and make servicing easy. A tubular chassis and beautiful hand-made coachwork of light alloy add luxury and individuality to the low-priced Paramount. The real leather and thick carpets inside are reminiscent of a £1,000 car.

Three types of standard garages are being produced by AGIP in Italy, of which this is the largest, with provision for restaurant and tobacco concessionaires. The medium size lacks these facilities, while the smallest has even fewer pumps and a modest office. All types have shelter on at least one side of the pumps

TRADE and INDUSTRY

The 27th Geneva Show will be held from March 14 to 24, 1957.

Jaguar service weeks will be held from July 23 to 27 by C. H. Truman and Co., Ltd., Nottingham; Eric Williams, Ltd., Worcester; Brown (Bath), Ltd., Bath; and Botwoods, Ltd., Ipswich.

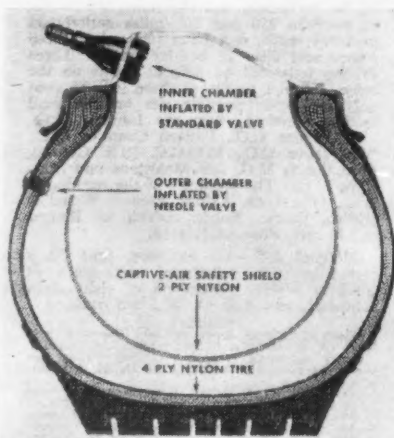

The five-acre factory of Borg-Warner, Ltd., at Letchworth, Hertfordshire, has been built in 13 months. Work on the foundations began on June 17, 1955, and the foundation stone was laid by Mr. Roy C. Ingersoll, chairman of Borg-Warner, Ltd., late in August (The Autocar, September 2). Planned output is 500 automatic transmissions and 250 automatic overdrives per day.

Increasing demand for petrol, diesel oil and industrial fuels in the West Midlands and Birmingham areas has led Shell-Mex and B.P., Ltd., to enlarge and modernize their distribution centre at Worcester. The new installation, which was opened last week by the Mayor of Worcester, Councillor Bertram Brotherton, J.P., covers an area of nearly seven acres and is one of the largest of its kind in the country.

Permission has been granted for the erection by the International Synthetic Rubber Co., Ltd., of a plant at Fawley, Southampton, which will cost £5,000,000. The plant is being designed by the Blaw-Knox Co., Pittsburgh, U.S.A. Construction will be effected by British contractors, and the bulk of the machinery will be bought in this country. It is estimated that in about two years some 50,000 tons of synthetic rubber will be produced, actually saving 30,000,000 dollars. The project has been undertaken by a group headed by the Dunlop Rubber Co., Ltd., with the Goodyear Tyre and Rubber Co. (Great Britain), Ltd., the Firestone Tyre and Rubber Co., Ltd., and the Michelin Tyre Co., Ltd.

The head office, sales, service and accounts departments of Runbaken Electrical Products have been moved to a new building at 45, Oxford Road, Manchester, 1.

The Esso Petroleum Co., Ltd., 36, Queen Anne's Gate, London, S.W.1, have published a booklet comprising three articles from the Esso magazine under the title Oil and the Future. The booklet explains in terms of volume of products and financial difficulties, what oil companies in Britain must face if they are to fill the gap between the actual energy requirements over the next 25 years and the available supplies of coal and nuclear power. Copies are available without charge on request.

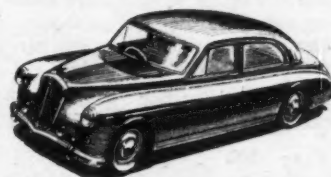

This drawing illustrates the construction of the new Captive Air Goodyear Tyre, described under the heading "Two-in-One Tyre" in News and Views on July 6

★ THE REMEDY... so easy to fit!
No wiring or drilling! In minutes it can be fitted underneath chassis by any handyman or garage assistant.

For years many drivers have been concerned about static... distressing cause of car-sickness to passengers (especially children) and pets. At last comes the solution: the "NEVASIK" Discharger. Not just another gadget but a simple, scientifically designed little instrument—about the price of a gallon of petrol—the "NEVASIK" Discharger really stops static trouble. Fit one now and it will last your car's lifetime. Only the contact stud occasionally needs renewing—a matter of pennies. Long-term tests have proved (and any friend who has one will confirm) that the "NEVASIK" Discharger opens the way to more motoring pleasure for passengers. Get one now from your garage—or accessory dealers. Models, also, for heavy vehicles.

Most disturbing Mrs. Smith

Just as you were dropping off to sleep too! What a pity it is some drivers think that if they have a fast car it must necessarily be a noisy one. On the contrary, a powerful car can be quiet too—if a Servais straight-through Silencer is fitted. By reason of its patented acoustic packing, the SERVAIS permits a free passage for the exhaust gases, thereby preserving power and reducing exhaust noise to an acceptable level. In other words, Mrs. Smith, the driver with a Servais has more power for himself and more peace for his neighbours.

RUST

has played havoc this Winter

Remember the prolonged icy spell and the gravel thrown up from ice bound roads? This daily sand-blasting did more damage to your car than months of normal treatment. Salt is mixed with this gravel—and a more powerful combination for chipping paint-work and accelerating corrosion would be hard to imagine.

Get busy now and repair the damage with Jenolite. Jenolite removes rust completely. It also deposits a phosphate coating which prevents further corrosion and provides a perfect key for paint adhesion.

Jenolite is used everywhere—in the garage and in the home, from the garden gate to the roof guttering.

Obtainable from your usual hardware stores

Jenolite Rust Remover and Preventer in bottles 1/10d. and 3/9d. Jenolite Chemical Sealer for maximum protection. In red or grey 1/2 pt. 4/3d., 1 pt. 7/6d., 1 qt. 14/-.

"I never knew Mrs. Jones could drive so well"

In a very short time a driver becomes a good driver with MANUMATIC Transmission System. Just select the gear and MANUMATIC does the rest, leaving the feet free for braking and accelerating. With no clutch to think about, the driver can concentrate on safer motoring.
